—Suit for $35,000 damages from the Lackawanna was started Tuesday by John Kelly, minor, through his father, Michael J. Kelly, for injuries the boy received July 1 last in the Diamond mine. He was employed as a "leader" or driver's helper and was unhooking a three-mule team from a trip of cars, when the mules started out, and the cars ran over him, crushing a leg that was later amputated. The boy asks for $25,000 and his father $10,000 for the loss of his assistance. —Dayton is a boom town, but differs from the boom towns of the early west in that the boom gives every indication of being permanent. Every factory in Dayton—and the city boasts of having a thousand of them—is working overtime in an effort to catch up with orders. Evidences of the flood are fast disappearing. The streets are being cleaned, and in the business section they are flushed nightly. Houses and stores are being repaired and repainted as fast as an army of carpenters, plumbers and painters can get around. Dayton has declared her intention of remaining the Gem City of Ohio, and if other towns don't look out she will be the Gem City of the country.

Stockton's "Lady, or the Tiger," no two readers seemed to see the story in the same light. The main point was not overlooked, however, and that is that while the possession of money is very convenient, such possession does not necessarily mean happiness.

Charles Schlager is painting and otherwise improving his brick houses, also the shop used by the Penn Glass Cutting Company. Miss Daisy Killam, book-keeper for the Hawley Glass Factory, was a caller in Ariel on Monday last.

Charley Schlager Thinks It's Pretty Cold Weather.

Charley Schlager was found hard at work with his paint brush putting some finishing touches to the brick houses out north from the Presbyterian church. He was warmly clad, a thick coat covering a regulation sweater. He said that the weather seemed very cold. He missed the clear sunny days of the zone. He said that much rain fell there, but that there were no long rainy seasons as many people suppose is the case. Sometimes it rained steadily for half a day, and it seemed as if the clouds were turned inside out. There seemed to be a genuine note of regret to his voice as he told of life in the tropics; but he'll get used to our ways and climate the longer he stays in this, his native country.

The Citizen Cannot Publish Anonymous Communications.

A communication from Hawley on the base ball subject, ostensibly finding fault with the report of a game that was recently played in Hawley, cannot be published for what we consider good and sufficient reasons. For instance, we know the person who gave the base ball information to us, and if he was wrong, then we know where to locate him. On the other hand, the writer of the communication gave us no name and in case he was in error we would find it very hard to locate him. It is manifestly unfair for the anonymous correspondent to ask newspapers to take their unsupported word, uttered in the dark, in preference to that of people who have nothing to conceal.
