Gossip from Washington

ALBERT JOHNSON, Republican member of congress from the state of Washington, greatly resembles Victor Murdock, the Progressive leader of the house, and is frequently mistaken for him. As Johnson is one of the most noted practical jokers in the house, the resemblance between the two is frequently embarrassing to the Progressive leader, for whenever he is mistaken for Murdock the Washington representative does not fail to give voice to sentiments which would be rank heresy coming from the lips of his double.

Dr. Joseph A. Holmes, director of the bureau of mines, has proved himself to be an effective bureaucratic alarm clock, for he has awakened the recumbent doorkeepers of the bureau and put them to work. They are now addressing envelopes and doing other simple clerical jobs in addition to their job of doorkeeping, and the corridor in the bureau of mines now echoes to the click of typewriters where once reverberated the drone of snores.

Miss Esther Cleveland, a debutante of the present season, has the distinction of being the only child ever born to a president in the White House. She was born July 18, 1895, near the close of her father's second term. At her debut she was noted for her tall, graceful figure and winsome personality. She will be eighteen years old this summer.

Sir Arthur Cecil Spring-Rice, who succeeded Ambassador James Bryce as Great Britain's representative here, when charge d'affaires at Teheran was once held up by brigands. The timely arrival of a body of Persian troops, however, saved the present ambassador's feelings and pocketbook and also prevented international complications.

Washington buds have their eye on Attorney General James C. McReynolds, "trust buster" extraordinary of the Taft administration and cabinet officer of the present one. Mr. McReynolds is the only unmarried member of the Wilson cabinet, and in consequence every Washington matron who has an eligible daughter has her eye on him. Besides being a bachelor, he is regarded as a comer.

Boaz W. Long of Las Vegas, N. M., the new chief of the Latin-American division of the state department, is an advertising agent of unusual ability. It is said that he has done more to inculcate ad. wisdom into the Mexican merchant and manufacturer than almost any other man in the country.

Today's Short Story

Her Love Tested

HERBERT GLENN and Laura Catherwood were guests at a house party one evening. At dinner the subject of conversation turned upon how far a woman should stand by a husband or lover who had committed a criminal offense. Miss Catherwood declared that a wife in such an event, if the crime were not too flagrant, was in duty bound to give her husband the benefit of her support and encouragement, but not a fiancée. For herself, she would break an engagement with any man who proved himself unworthy. Several of the guests looked at Glenn inquiringly. Noticing their glances, he remarked, "If the girl I loved sinned I would stand by her, not because it was my duty, but because I loved her."

One day a week later the host called his guests into the drawing room, shut the doors and said to them: "One of us, a lady, this morning left a valuable brooch on her dresser when she came down to breakfast, but, thinking it unwise to leave an article of such value so exposed, went immediately back for it. She had not been gone from her room five minutes, but the brooch was gone. One of us is a thief."

Every one stood mute for a moment. Then one of the men said: "I, for one, cannot rest even as one of a number thus suspected. I demand that while we are here you have our rooms searched and then search every one of us."

Every guest joined in the demand, but it was proposed that the guests be first searched.

Laura Catherwood had been examined and was standing apart from the throng when Herbert Glenn approached her and, giving her an appealing look, handed her something wrapped in a bit of paper.

Had the roof dropped upon her she could not have been more startled or crushed. Glenn was the last man searched, after which the doors were thrown open and the guests scattered. Glenn and Miss Catherwood alone remaining in the drawing room.

"How could you have done such a thing?" were her first words.

"I wanted it for you. When it was too late I saw what I had done. I release you from your engagement."

Miss Catherwood without a word left him. For two days he pleaded his cause with her, though he asked only for forgiveness, not a continuance of their engagement. On the third day she forgave him, at the same time breaking the engagement, and on the fifth consented to take him back on probation.

That evening while the party were at dinner a small gold covered dish was brought in and placed on the table. "What's in it?" asked the host.

There were plenty of guesses, but none correct.

"Perhaps you may remember," said the host, "a discussion at this table during which I averred that a woman would stand by a man she loved in case he prove unworthy and because she loved him. It was determined between Herbert Glenn and myself to arrange a test case, Herbert being desirous to see if his fiancée would act as she had said she would if he appeared as a criminal. I stole the brooch and turned it over to Herbert, who passed it to Laura Catherwood, confessing the theft to her. It has taken her five days to forgive the supposed criminal and give him a chance to redeem himself."

For a moment two emotions struggled with each other in Miss Catherwood's breast—anger at having been duped and joy that her lover was, after all, innocent. Presently a smile broke over her face, though there was moisture in her eyes. Impulsively she reached her hand across the table to her lover.

SEASONABLE DINNER MENU

Grapefruit Macedoine.
Veal Steak. Potato Patties.
Stuffed Tomato Salad.
Rhubarb Pie. Demitasse.

Grapefruit Macedoine.—Take the pulp out of the grapefruit very carefully in small pieces and mix it with some preserved ginger cut in fine pieces, fill the sherbet glasses or fruit shells, add a little rum or sherry and garnish with cubes of mint jelly.

Veal Steak.—A new way to prepare veal steak is to place it in a pan with a lump of butter, sprinkle with flour, salt and pepper and bake in a hot oven for half an hour.

Potato Patties.—Two cupfuls of mashed potatoes and one-half cupful of sugar, five tablespoonfuls of melted butter, three well beaten eggs, one cupful of sweet milk, five teaspoonfuls of baking powder, five and one-half cupfuls of flour, teaspoonful of nutmeg. Mold into oblong shapes and fry a golden brown in boiling lard.

Rhubarb Pie.—Two cupfuls of rhubarb chopped fine, one cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of flour, yolks of two eggs. Stir all together and bake with one crust. Let the pie cool and make a frosting with the whites of eggs, two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Put this frosting on the pie and place it in the oven to brown.

An Old Favorite

Mother o' Mine

If I were drowned in the deepest sea
I know whose tears would come down to me,
Mother o' mine.

If I were hanged on the highest hill
I know whose love would follow me still,
Mother o' mine.

If I were damned of body and soul
I know whose prayers would make me whole,
Mother o' mine.

The Home Beautiful | Porch Festooned With Wistaria

Houses of simple and severe architecture can be relieved of plainness by the judicious use of climbing vines. With care in training beautiful effects may be achieved such as here pictured. Here wistaria festooned across the entire veranda adds charm to an attractive colonial dwelling. Wistaria grows in almost any soil and is propagated by seeds and cuttings. It produces long clusters of showy blue flowers in the spring and sometimes blossoms again in the fall. Plain barren buildings and fences can also be greatly improved by planting shrubbery against them, bordered with perennials or other plantings, and in this way partially break up the straight lines that will remain with the planting of the best of vines. Shrubbery is an essential part of good planting schemes for any yard and often will make good substitutes for vines—that is, where it is desired only to hide the base lines up to a height of six feet or so.

A French beauty specialist gives the following directions for washing the face, so that a healthy and attractive complexion may result: At night on retiring wash your face thoroughly in hot water and sulphur soap; then use cold and hot water alternately, removing all the soap, and finish with a dash of cold water. Should the water be hard a few drops of borax may be added. Should there be any blackheads on the face press them out gently with a comedon extractor, which you can purchase from any dealer in surgical instruments, and apply sparingly a small amount of equal parts of zinc oxide and sulphur ointment.

In the morning remove the ointment and to cleanse the face, gently mop it with a piece of clean absorbent cotton dipped in oil of sweet almonds. Wipe the face again carefully with another piece of cotton, of which you should always have an abundant supply. When the face is perfectly dry you can apply a little good powder, wiping it off with a soft chambray skin, and the toilet of your face is over for the day.

FIRST AID TO THE COOK.

A handy kitchen memorandum is made as follows: Take a circle of white or tinted cardboard about ten inches in diameter, punch a small hole in the center and another at one side. Through the latter thread a ribbon for a loop to hang by. This is the top. Around the edge of the circle, starting close to the top, write the names of supplies needed constantly in the house from A to Z. Opposite each word cut a small notch or slit. Take a dozen or more pieces of bright colored cord, each about eight or ten inches long, pass through the hole in the center and secure with a knot of cords. When in need of anything take one cord and fasten it over the slit on the edge. It will pass directly under the name of the article, and your memorandum will be ready for next morning's order with no more worry.
