Gossip from Washington

JAMES S. HARLAN, the able son of the late chief justice, who holds a high place in the councils of the interstate commerce commission, in years gone by was an ardent and expert bicyclist. It took a broken leg and six weeks in bed to cure him of the habit.

Baron Chinda, the Japanese ambassador, who has figured largely in the public prints recently by reason of California's legislation against his countrymen, got most of his American education at De Pauw university, in Indiana, where he was a member of the D. K. E. society. In those days he was known as the "Japanese Hoosier," and incidentally he was an intimate friend of former United States Senator Albert J. Beveridge, who was then working his way through college.

BARON CHINDA.

Edgar E. Clark, the sociologist of the interstate commerce commission, was once the most popular passenger conductor on the old Rio Grande Western railroad.

Congressman Ben Grubb Humphreys of Mississippi, whose father, General Benjamin G. Humphreys of the Confederate army, was governor of that state from 1865 to 1868, when he was forcibly ejected from the statehouse by Federal troops, being about three years old at the time, accompanied his father in his enforced departure from the capitol. The next time that he entered the capitol it was in a Yankee uniform as a lieutenant in the Second Mississippi regiment during the war with Spain.

Key Pittman, chairman of the senate committee on territories and the junior senator from Nevada, is the only Klondiker in the upper house. He arrived in Dawson City during the midst of the gold rush with about half a ton of provisions and a Canadian dime. As drinks were $1 apiece, Pittman says, he learned what the pinch of real poverty means. He is a great-grand-nephew of Francis Scott Key, who wrote "The Star Spangled Banner."

KEY PITTMAN.

Representative Julius Kahn of San Francisco is the only actor in congress. For ten years before he studied law he played prominent parts in the companies of Edwin Booth, Joseph Jefferson, Tommaso Salvini, Clara Morris and other famous stars.

Stanley E. Bowdler, the congressman who succeeded Nick Longworth, Colonel Roosevelt's son-in-law, as representative from the First Ohio district, is the most rabid anti-suffragist in the house. He first came into the limelight through labeling his predecessor, then his opponent, during the pre-election campaign as "an investment largely along the line of ornamentation and luxury for the district."

Today's Short Story

An Impulsive Lover

THE Von Puttkamers were one of the most respectable families in Germany. Their customs, their manners, their daily occupations, were the same as they had been several hundred years before, when the first Puttkamer was permitted to prefix von to his name. They lived on the family estate at Beinfeld. Nothing had ever occurred to disturb the serenity of their lives, and it did not occur to any one of them that any disconcerting episode would ever happen to them.

The time came, however, when the whole Puttkamer family was startled as if by the shock of an earthquake.

An application arrived from a young officer in the Prussian army for permission to pay his addresses to Johanna Puttkamer. This was equivalent to asking for her hand. Who was he? A von, an officer, a member of an excellent family. But with this list of recommendations ended. At the university where he had studied his wild ways had fastened upon him the sobriquet of "Mad." A big man, with long legs, he strode through German customs, tramping them at every step. He never did anything as any one else would do it. He had no reverence, no fear. He smoked big black cigars and drank casks of beer. Terrible as it was to give up the maiden, it was exulting to risk her happiness with such a man.

A family concave was called—that is, a concave among the older members. The applicant's position, talents, habits, were discussed and testimony regarding them taken. On the one hand was the young officer's family and social status, on the other his mad pranks, his contempt for established forms. It was not deemed wise to positively decline what might prove a good match nor to accept what might prove a very bad one. Better temporize until an acquaintance with the suitor could be gained. The final decision was to invite him to the family domain and look him over.

When the day came round and the hour approached for the suitor's arrival the Puttkamer family and the oldest and most trusted relations were lined up to receive him. Johanna was stationed in the center of the group between her father and mother. A clatter of horse's hoofs was heard coming up the driveway at a gallop, and a moment later a tall, lank young man threw himself to the ground. Without a moment's hesitation the lover ran forward, flung his arms around Johanna, drew her tightly to his breast and covered her face with kisses. Meanwhile the scandalized parents stood flashing lightning from their eyes at this annihilation of all their plans, all their precaution.

But the victory was with the young man, who had carried the position by storm. It was not long before the father and mother realized that the matter was settled. What! Permit their daughter to remain unbetrothed to the man who had embraced her! Never! The inspection was ended at its beginning; the probation did not take place. It was a settled fact that little Johanna was to be given over to her lover though he were a monster. Before he left Beinfeld the pair went through the forms of betrothal.

Years after this triumph, with the same whirlwind decision, the man who made it achieved others in a far different field—that of statesmanship and diplomacy. His name will be handed down among the greatest of European statesmen. It was Otto von Bismarck.

HAVE YOU OBSERVED—

That roses and anemones are used as girdles? They are especially effective used with white lace on white gowns for bridesmaids.

That buttons are by no means the necessary complement of buttonholes? Some of the new frocks show rows of exaggeratedly simulated buttonholes outlined in satin or other materials down the front of the skirt, with a silk tassel the color of the satin instead of a button.

First Aid to the Cook

Mint Sauce.—To be served with spring lamb. Three tablespoonfuls vinegar, two tablespoonfuls mint, one tablespoonful sugar and one teaspoonful salt. Mix ten minutes before using.

A Summer Dessert Called "Six Threes."—To be frozen. Three cupfuls of sugar, three cupfuls of cream, three cupfuls of water, three bananas (crushed), three oranges (juice) and three lemons (juice).

Creamed Cucumber Sauce.—For planked or boiled fish. Peel, cut into halves and remove seeds from six cucumbers. Grate them and drain until perfectly dry. Add to the grated cucumber one grated onion, juice of one lemon, one-half teaspoonful of salt, pepper and fold in one-half cupful of whipped cream. Serve at once.

Marshmallow Pudding.—The whites of three eggs beaten stiff, one-half cupful of cold water, one-half cupful of boiling water, one cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of gelatin, one teaspoonful of flavoring. Soak gelatin in cold water until soft. Add sugar and flavoring, then boiling water. When the mixture begins to set pour over the beaten egg whites and beat constantly for twenty minutes. Then put into molds to set.

AT A GLANCE.

The largest cave in the world is the Mammoth cave in Kentucky.

Menelik, the late king of Abyssinia, claimed lineage that reached farther back than any European sovereign, tracing a direct descent from King Solomon.

The books of a San Francisco coal company were recently examined and showed that in a few years it had sold 64,000 tons more of coal than it had ever had.

An insurance company that has taken a census of all the tall buildings in New York city reports that there are more thirteen story buildings than of any other height.

The operators at the government wireless station near Newport, R. I., recently "picked up" a conversation between two Argentine cruisers approximately 6,000 miles away.

A French scientist claims to have invented a "cold" electric light requiring so little current that all the power necessary to light a 2,000 candle power lamp without heat may be generated by a squirrel turning a wheel in its cage.

Cleopatra's last resting place, it is said, is in the garden of the National library, Rue Vivienne, Paris. Her sarcophagus was stolen by a servant years ago, the story runs, and thus came into the library's possession, being preserved in the medal room there until 1870.

The Home Beautiful

THE hall, especially the upstairs hall, is a difficult problem in house furnishing. If it happens to be a little wider than ordinary it may be fitted up like the one illustrated here. Curtains swung across the arches will give all desired privacy. In this case the end of the hall was fitted up with corner cabinets and a writing desk. The wide leaved window admits plenty of air and light. A couch at one side and a low cabinet at the other side of the hall give it the attractive homelike appearance most upper halls lack. This furnishing idea may also be applied to small, narrow hall rooms, the couch serving as a bed and the cabinets being corner cupboards.

Both the fastidious summer tourist and the seasoned traveler will welcome a dainty toilet accessory of recent importation which successfully eliminates the necessity for carrying either face cloths or sponges. Hygienic sponges these ingenious articles are called. They are composed of absorbent cotton in compressed tablet form about the size of a quarter and one-half inch in thickness. When saturated with water they expand to the proportions of a small face cloth about the size of the palm of the hand. After being once used they are then discarded. The sponges are perfumed with a rose odor and come ten in a pasteboard tube or carton. While these tablets are designed expressly for tourists and travelers in general, they would prove a decided acquisition to the home toilet supplies. A box of them placed conveniently in the guest room could not fail to be appreciated by the occupant.

FASHION SNAPSHOTS.

Short boleros in flowered silks are edged with fine tulle and lace platings. Fine lace and tulle flounced skirts are made with crepon linen tunic corsage bodices. The collarless shirt waist predominates. It may have either half or full length sleeves. Many well dressed women are fully displaying the color most becoming to them on all their dresses.

THE BEST NEWSPAPER WE EVER READ.

We recommend The Philadelphia Sunday Record to all High-Grade Home Lovers.

It is seldom that there comes to us a paper we can praise as wholesome and clean in every respect, but The Philadelphia Sunday Record certainly deserves its title as "the greatest home newspaper of all."

It has feature pages for every member of the family. We were surprised at the variety and scope of its articles. The best artists and authors each week contribute some of the work that has made them famous.

The story that interested us the most concerned an old barn near here that we used to play around so many years ago that we are ashamed to tell.

It is just this clean, human interest touch that makes The Philadelphia Sunday Record a favorite everywhere, particularly in the country.

Best of all, it costs only three cents. You had better do as we did—order next Sunday's copy today and be sure of getting it.
