Members of the local Seventh Day Adventist church had their hearts cheered when they heard of the remarkable growth of their denomination, as contained in a report sent out from the world conference of S. D. A. which is now in session in Washington, D. C. The report was sent to Olive Cobb, an officer of the local organization, and gives the growth of the body during the past 50 years, from May 21, 1863, to the 23d day of May, 1913. The report says: Year by year has witnessed continual progress, until to-day this work is being carried forward in eighty-six countries, where it is making adherents and to which laborers have been sent, where missions have been opened, conferences organized and schools, printing plants, and sanitariums set in operation and doing their appointed work. Instead of a handful of believers, with few facilities, there is now a body of believers numbering 114,206, with many and varied facilities for proclaiming the message. Among these are the excellent training schools for the preparation of laborers and it is gratifying to know that the work of these schools, so well supplemented by other denominational institutions, has been so effective that to-day there is one active evangelistic laborer for every twenty-two members in the denomination, and including the laborers in denominational institutions there is one laborer for every twelve members. The extension of this work into so many countries has made necessary the preparation of literature to meet the requirements in all the lands entered. This work has been promptly undertaken and to-day denominational literature is prepared and circulated in seventy-five languages. And there are sixteen other languages in use as the medium of communicating this orally and in which the printed page will in due time appear. The year 1912 realized the largest amount of funds ever raised by the denomination as well as the largest amount per capita. The amount contributed for all purposes was $2,702,099.92, and the amount per capita was $23.66. The per capita contributions during the closing year of each of the five decades since this work was organized have been as follows: First decade, $5.55; second, $5.65; third, $11.59; fourth, $11.01; fifth, $23.66.
