

SNEERS AT STORY TOLD BY MULHALL

Author's Letter Refers to Exposure as "Bunk."

REVELATIONS CONTINUED

Mulhall on Stand Says That Number
Code Was Used to Hide Names of Prominent Office Holders—Identifies More Letters.

Washington, July 16.—While Colonel Mulhall, former lobbyist for the National Association of Manufacturers, continued his identification of letters and telegrams, most of which have already been made public, Senator Reed interrupted to introduce a letter to Mulhall from S. Langtry Crockett, author of "The Plunderers," written from Thomaston, Me., a few weeks ago.

In it Mr. Crockett said he believed all Mulhall had said in his published story, with the exception of his declaration that he was making it public for the benefit of humanity.

"This bunk," for the good of humanity," wrote Crockett, "is being overplayed."

Mr. Crockett wrote that he hoped Mulhall "was making a good thing" out of his story and wrote that he was willing to take the stand and tell what he knew about Mulhall's credibility. The reading of the letter added a touch of comedy to the proceedings.

Mulhall declared that under Secretary Cushing's administration the association's methods were so secretive that names were never mentioned.

"As an instance," he said, "Vice President Sherman was No. 8, Representative Littlefield 9, and I myself was known as No. 11."

Mulhall's operations in breaking the machinists' strike in Cleveland and the shoe workers' strike in St. Louis were described in detail in a score of letters.

To Defeat Johnson.

One letter, written to W. D. Sayles of Cleveland, interested the committee. In it Mulhall said that he believed Sayles "should call on President Van Cleave to have the members of the N. A. M., in Cleveland unite in defeating the Hon. T. L. Johnson, your present mayor." Mulhall said he would like to go to Cleveland to aid in this work. This letter was dated July 16, 1907.

Mulhall declared that he went to Cleveland under direct instructions to defeat Johnson.

In a letter written by Secretary Schwedtmann to Mulhall on Aug. 9, 1907, the N. A. M. secretary said:

"There are some large things brewing, and there is every indication that in our tariff campaign we have with us the majority of the Republican leading congressmen and senators and men higher up than that too. To a small degree this is a fact also on the labor issue and some of the other propositions advocated by the N. A. M."

A letter dated in 1907 showing that W. T. Haines, now governor of Maine, joined the N. A. M. and paid $50 dues in advance was read, and Mulhall was asked why Haines, a lawyer, joined the organization.

"Why, he is a big wood pulp manufacturer also," said Mulhall.

"But why did he join the N. A. M.? Was it for political reasons?" asked Senator Reed.

"Why, yes, sir," said Mulhall. "He knew I could do a great deal for him in a political way."

Horse and Wagon Bribe.

Mulhall said that a worker named Harriman, who helped elect Congressman Littlefield in 1906, had a horse and wagon given to him to start in the express business at Thomaston, Me., by the N. A. M. A letter referring to this as "a legacy" was identified by Mulhall.

Another letter from Schwedtmann to Mulhall, after complimenting him on his good work, said:

"If we could only get a worker like you in every state it would be up to the N. A. M. to name the next president."

Expense accounts showing money paid by Mulhall to striking shoe workers in the fall of 1907 in St. Louis were introduced. The total accounted for was $333.25, and Mulhall said that "most of it went to workers for betraying the strikers." Other accounts bringing the total up to about $1,000 were also identified by Mulhall.

"When I went out there," said the witness, "I was told to approach the heads of the union and see what I could do."

BRYAN'S LECTURE TOUR STIRS UP CRITICISM

Senator Bristow Offers Resolution on Subject.

Washington, July 16.—Senator Bristow introduced a resolution aimed at William J. Bryan's statement that he was obliged to go on a lecture tour because of an insufficient official salary, calling on President Wilson to report what salary would be sufficient to enable the secretary of state to remain permanently at his post. Objection of Democratic senators prevented its immediate consideration.

The Bristow resolution called attention to Mr. Bryan's predecessors who served with salaries ranging from $3,500 to $8,000 and declared that "no one of them was compelled to neglect the duties of his office because of the meagerness of the salary."

It stated that the salary was increased to $12,000 in 1911, but that "the great commoner who now occupies that office has stated that the salary of $1,000 a month is not sufficient to enable him to live comfortably and that he is compelled to neglect his duties and go on the lecture platform to earn a living."

Attention was called further to the Mexican, Japanese, British and other international questions before the state department, which, the resolution alleged, "were not receiving full consideration."

It ended by requesting the president to give prompt attention to the matter and report to congress what salary would be sufficient so that congress could "relieve the country of the great loss it suffers in being deprived of the services" of the secretary of state during the time he may be on the lecture platform.

Reading of the resolution was greeted by broad smiles on the Republican side of the chamber. Senators Kern, Lewis and other Democrats were on their feet before it was concluded and objected to its consideration. Under the rules of the senate it went over until the next session.
