—Beginning July 1st, the Deposit office was, for the second time, made a second class office. A year ago it was put back to third class, because the receipts failed to come up to the required amount.

—J. C. Young, of Liberty, and his associates, have sold their 18,000-acre tract of timber land, in South Carolina, to the U. S. government for $162,000, for considerably more than twice what they paid for it.

—W. H. Varcoe, record keeper for the local camp of Maccabees, paid $500 to Mrs. George Thomas, of Carbondale, this week, being the amount of insurance her late husband carried in this fraternal society.

—It is probable that the Rev. J. R. Atkinson, of Newark, N. J., so favorably known as a speaker in Honesdale, will be the preacher at Grace Episcopal church at the 10:30 a. m. service Sunday, July 27. Evening service at 7:30; Sunday school at 12. During the month of August the services will be suspended.

—A freight car on an Erie west bound train jumped the track at Deposit early Monday morning and blocked both tracks for several hours. Trains Six, Seven and 48 were delayed some time. The Susquehanna wreckers were called to the scene of the accident. The derrick of the wreckers broke and this further delayed the opening of the tracks.

—Deterioration of corn on a large scale has occurred this month in the great corn-producing states of the Southwest—Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, and Oklahoma. Last year these States yielded 735,000,000 bushels, or nearly one-fourth of the country's crop, under a normal precipitation. Thus far into the season rainfall has been reported as no more than 72 per cent. or normal.

—The huckleberry crop on the Shawangunk mountains and also in the Pocono, Pa., region is short this season and pickers are obliged to travel twice as far as in past years, when the berries were plentiful. —We would appreciate it if our subscribers would promptly inform us if The Citizen is delivered improperly. Our carriers are instructed to deliver the paper inside the house wherever possible, and not to roll it up and throw it on the porch or in the yard. We also warn them not to deliver it by proxy. —While swimming with a crowd of boys in the Susquehanna river, near Lanesboro, Thomas Reed, aged 17 years, was drowned at a treacherous point known as Shutt's Eddy, the scene of many former drownings. It is believed that the youth was seized with a cramp, for the other boys, who were nearer the shore, saw Reed disappear beneath the surface, seemingly unable to help himself. Edward Lannon, who was walking by at the time, swam out to the Reed boy, but arrived too late. Deceased is survived by his father and his grandfather, Watson Reed, with whom he resided.

—The Davis bill providing for voting machines to be used at elections in Pennsylvania was vetoed by Gov. Tener. The bill was much debated in the recent session and it was finally arranged that counties could have machines at their option. The governor says: "This bill is objectionable for the reason that if such innovation is to become part of the election laws it should be general in its scope and not made optional with the various county commissioners throughout the state. Such a provision, in my judgment, would utterly destroy the uniformity of voting which is essential."

—Supreme Court Justice Goff decided recently that there is such an offence as disorderly conduct, and dismissed a writ of habeas corpus sued out by Sidney Cohen, who had been sentenced to the workhouse for this transgression by a City Magistrate. In his petition asking to be released Cohen declared that the Magistrate who sentenced him was without jurisdiction because there is no such offence under the statutes now in force. The court decided that the laws give ample authority for committing persons charged with disorderly conduct "because it is beyond human ingenuity in the English language to specify and particularize all the acts of reckless or vicious men in a populous city that may tend to be a breach of the peace." The court also held that there is no appeal from a commitment for disorderly conduct, because in enacting the law the Legislature has seen fit to withhold the right of appeal.

Johnson was a carpet weaver, and while delivering some goods at that place three months ago he was taken ill. —The death of John A. Reith, Pottsville's heaviest man, Tuesday, aged 61, involved unusual funeral problems. He weighed 500 pounds and the casket to hold his body was so large that it was impossible to take the corpse into St. John the Baptist church, of which Reith was a member, neither was it possible to take it out of either the doors or windows of his home, so a part of the house was torn out for this purpose. Persons must apply to the Attorney General and pensions will be paid quarterly beginning next January. The bill awaits the signature of the Governor.

—The bill giving Luzerne county an additional law judge has been signed by Governor Tener, who immediately after signing it appointed Hon. Benjamin R. Jones, judge to serve till the first Monday of next January. The principal reason that Luzerne got another judge is because of frequent deadlocks among the four judges that were. They have been deadlocked for eighteen months or more on the appointment of a prison board. Judge Jones served part of a year four years ago by appointment of the governor to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Lynch.

—Why is our great Secretary of State's plaintive request that he be allowed to depart from his office at the end of his term with his bankroll intact so sniffed at? Why do his dignified utterances, in which there is nothing maudlin, move the man in the street to the ribald diagnosis that "he must be full of grape juice?" Do not the pages of a celebrated historian of the Japanese Empire supply a case exactly on all fours with our good Secretary's? Does not W. S. Gilbert limn for us a distinguished First Lord of the Treasury who dined with middle class people on reasonable terms and danced at cheap suburban parties for a moderate fee?—New York Sun.

—Candidates for office at the primary election to be held on Tuesday, September 16, may now secure their blank petition forms at the office of the county commissioners. A supply has been received and there will be plenty to go around according to the number received. One hundred names are required on the petitions for county offices and ten signers on each petition for borough or township offices including judge of election. The signers must place the date after their name. After the necessary number of names have been secured the person circulating the petition must make affidavit to the fact that the men who signed the petition knew the purport of the petition. No elector, under the new state-wide law, shall sign more candidates' petitions for the same office than he can vote for at the election. The last day for filing petitions for county, borough and township nominations is August 26.

HAY GOOD IN WAYNE COUNTY

A heavy crop of hay was cut on the Hubbard farm this week.

On Judge Searle's farm, at Siko, timothy stood five feet six inches tall.

Other sections in Wayne county the hay crop is reported good.

In New York state the crop is far below the average. Dispatches from Broome and other New York state counties state that the crop will be low in quality and quantity over most of the eastern hay sections.

The western hay crop is reported to be good.

The hay grown in the eastern section of Wayne county is better than at first expected. It is thick and tall growth. The more money spent on the meadows for fertilizer the larger the crop. Wayne county farmers can no longer expect to reap large and abundant crops without fertilization. The old meadows run out if they are not renewed.

DIRECT ELECTIONS IS SOURCE OF WORRY

Fear States Will Fail to Provide Funds for Selecting Senators Before Election.

Complications are predicted as certain to arise over the installation of the direct election method for the selection of United States Senators. Most of the trouble is expected to result from the failure of State Legislatures to provide promptly, appropriate methods for carrying out the recent amendment to the constitution for the direct senatorial election.

Leaders of the Senate majority are more anxious about the situation than the Republicans. Should two or more vacancies on the Democratic side of the chamber occur the narrow margin of power in the body would be gone.

There are thirty-two senatorial terms which will expire on March 1915. Some of the States affected already have provided a method of popular election of Senators, but a great number of them have not, and vacancies caused by death or resignation may call at any time for a popular election.

Democratic members of the Committee on Privileges and Elections have considered the advisability of having a national law prescribing a method applying to all States alike. To do this Congress would exercise its power under the constitution to revise State regulation as to the time and manner of selecting Senators, a step which never has appealed to Southern Senators. No sooner had the suggestion of Federal Legislation been made than they entered a protest and the idea has been abandoned.

The Legislature, of Georgia, recently enacted legislation in regard to the placing of the names of Senators on the ballots and has elected the first Senator by this method. The Florida Legislature decided it already had sufficient laws for this purpose. The Texas Legislature has been called to meet in a special session to consider, among other things the passing of laws for election machinery in accordance with the amendment.

The Governor of Maryland has decided he is empowered under existing laws to issue a writ of election to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Rayner. Senator Jackson is now serving by designation of the Governor. Such constitutional lawyers of the Senate as Senator Root and Sutherland are said to entertain doubt as to the power of the Governor to issue the writ, and the appearance of a new Senator from Maryland to take the oath of office may mark the initial fight in the Senate over the Senatorial election machinery.

The situation is complicated by the amendment further limiting the Governor's power to fill vacancies in the Senate. In the past a Governor has filled vacancies occurring when the legislature was not in session.

Hereafter a Governor may not fill a vacancy unless the legislature of his State has empowered him to make temporary appointments until the people may fill the vacancies by election as the legislature may direct.

The Democratic Congressional Committee has had the matter called to its attention, and it may take steps to urge the States to pass legislation as quickly as possible.

It will see to it that all the States that elect Senators for the terms beginning in 1915 act before that time. Should vacancies occur during the pendency of the tariff act. in States where suitable machinery is not now provided, it is understood the committee would at once urge the convening of the State legislatures to authorize the Governors to appoint and to provide for the placing of candidates for Senator on the ballots in future elections.

PROVIDE MOTHER PENSIONS.

Allegheny County Commissioners Appropriate $13,000 Under New Law.

The commissioners of Allegheny county, Pa., have appropriated $13,000 for the payment of pensions to mothers who have children dependent upon them. Before the money is available Governor Tener under the law enacted by the last legislature must name a board of trustees, by whose direction the money, together with Allegheny county's proportion of the $100,000 appropriated by the state, will be expended.

Only the mothers of children dependent because of the death or desertion of their fathers are eligible to pensions, and the mothers must be qualified in the judgment of the trustees to administer the pension and care for their children. The appropriation is in the nature of an experiment and is to cover one year.

Dig Up Indian Hoard.

Two plots of gold and a skeleton were unearthed in San Bernardino by G. W. Tyler when conducting street grading operations in that city. The gold, in dust and nuggets, was worth $500. The skeleton is thought to be that of some ancient Indian chief, as, in addition to the gold, many trinkets, such as those with which Indians formerly decorated themselves, were found with the bones.

DRAMATIC NOTES.

Potash and Perlmutter Take a Partner. (With Apologies to Montague Glass.)

(News From Eltinge Theatre, New York).

"Might you know a feller by the name Cohen, Maybe?" Harris Fishbein asked his partner, Jacob Blintz.

"A question!" Blintz replied, "I know a million fellers by the name Cohen—anyway six."

"I mean Cohen which is going as partners together mit Potash & Perlmutter," Harris Fishbein explained, "a feller by the name Cohen which used to was in the show business."

"Do you mean George M. Cohen, which used to was in the show business corner of Forty-third street and Broadway?" Blintz asked.

"That's the feller," Fishbein declared.

"Couldn't them two boys find some schlemiel in the cloak and suit trade to go as partners together mit?" Blintz commented.

"What do you mean—some schlemiel in the cloak and suit trade?" Fishbein retorted. "How do you know this feller, George M. Cohen, is schlemiel?"

"Listen, Harris," Blintz began. "Any feller which is got to go out from the theayter business into the garment business because he could not make out in the theayter business at all, understand me, must got to be a schlemiel."

"In what way must he got to be a schlemiel?" Fishbein asked.

"Because, if a feller is in the theayter business, Harris, where none of his competitors open up their places until anyhow 8 o'clock in the evening, y'understand, and he don't know enough to open at 7 o'clock, we would say, for example, and in that way cop out a whole lot of his competitors' trade, y'understand, then such a feller must got to be a schlemiel. Ain't it?"

"Maybe you are right," Fishbein said, "but this here George M. Cohen had misfortune also, Jake. He is got working for him a couple of years ago a feller by the name Wallingford, and such a loafer as that feller was you wouldn't believe at all. I bet you he ganvers pretty nearm the whole business away from Cohen."

"And do you think Cohen would be any better off mit Potash & Perlmutter?" Blintz asked. "You could take it from me, Harris(this here George M. Cohen is going from frying pan into another, that's all."

At this juncture there entered Max Gelb, salesman for the Hamsuckett Mills.

"Well, boys, did you hear about Potash & Perlmutter?"

"Nu, what about 'em?" said Jacob Blintz, who believed in letting the other fellow tell all he knew first.

"Why, A. H. Woods, the theatrical producer, has had a play written about them," Geib said, "and it's to open at the George M. Cohen Theatre on August 16."

"A play about them!" Blintz exclaimed, glaring at his partner.

"That's what I said," Gelb continued. "Alexander Carr is going to be in it and Barney Bernard, Louise Dresser and Elita Proctor Otis and Lee Kohlmar and Joseph Kilgour and a whole lot of other first class actors. I'll send you boys up a couple of tickets."

"Much obliged, Max," Barney replied, "but we couldn't buy another yard of piece goods not if you was to send us up the whole theayter itself. We ain't got no more space in our stockroom for a reel of thread even."

Half an hour later Blintz turned to his partner with a satirical grin.

"Do you got any more unconfirmed rumors up your sleeve, Harris?" he asked. "Might Sammet Brothers is going as partners together mit Gatti—Charosus, maybe?"
