

SLAIN GIRL CARRIED TO GRAVE

Coroner's Physician Advances New Theory to Explain Death Mystery. New York, Aug. 13.—Dr. Albert C. Weston, coroner's physician, asserted that the girl, believed to have been Anna C. Lopeck, whose body was found in a grove in Inwood, near Spuyten Duyvil creek, was murdered elsewhere and the body carried to the spot where it was discovered Sunday night. Dr. Weston examined the ground thoroughly and declared that, as the girl's throat had been cut, there should have been more evidence of hemorrhage at the scene if she was killed in the woods. There was very little, however. The coroner's physician said that death was caused by blows on the head, the girl's skull being fractured in two places. Dr. Weston said he believed that the murderer or murderers had tried to decapitate the victim in order to prevent identification and that approaching footsteps frightened away the slayer or slayers. Dr. Weston made only a superficial examination, delaying the autopsy in order to give further opportunity for identification. The body was at the morgue when Dr. Weston found twenty-five stab wounds on the face, two fractures of the skull and two slashes on the throat. The coroner's physician denounced the police for being slow in sending the body to the morgue, delaying it to allow department photographers to photograph it where found and for the matron at the West One Hundred and Fifty-second street station to examine the clothing.

GOVERNOR SULZER OF N. Y. IMPEACHED

House Vote Stood 79 to 45 After All Night Session. Report That Mrs. Sulzer is Ready to Confess.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 13.—With three votes more than the required majority, Governor William Sulzer early Wednesday was impeached by the assembly for alleged "high crimes and misdemeanors" in connection with his campaign fund. After an all-night session, spent by the majority in filibustering until "Tammany" absentees could arrive, the vote was taken at 5:16 a. m., resulting 79 for impeachment to 45 against. The first impeachment of a governor of New York state came close on the heels of the most sensational feature in the Sulzer-Murphy war, when Mrs. Sulzer told certain senators that she was responsible for the Sulzer stock market deals and that the governor knew nothing about it. She sought to shoulder all blame. Friends of the governor took an entirely different view. They asserted that Sulzer would be governor until the senate passed on the charges preferred by the assembly.

"They pointed out that the present constitution of the state of New York does not cover the point. Its provisions regarding impeachment apply only to the removal of 'judicial officers.'" The old constitution provided for the automatic suspension of the governor by the filing of charges.

Lieutenant Governor Glynn declined to take any hand in the controversy. He said it would have to be settled by the senate.

That Governor Sulzer will decline to step out is regarded as certain, and it is equally certain that the Tammany majority will declare Glynn acting governor immediately.

It is believed Sulzer will decline to surrender the executive office and the seal and some of the more radical of the Sulzer partisans declared the governor would call out the militia to aid him.

Governor Sulzer took the news of his impeachment with equanimity and calmness, and went to bed immediately after he heard that the Levy resolution had passed.

His only statement was that he will fight the impeachment by applying to the Supreme Court for an order restraining the further proceedings. He said he would carry the case to the United States court of appeals.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 13.—After waiting all day for belated members favorable to the removal of William Sulzer from the governorship, the assembly met last night to take action on the Levy resolution for the impeachment of the governor.

Speaker Smith called the assembly to order at 10:11 o'clock last night. A call of the house was ordered to ascertain the absentees.

Eclipsing in sensation the many sided features of Tammany's all day hunt for the seventy-six votes needed to impeach was the authoritative statement that Mrs. Sulzer, wife of the governor, was prepared to shoulder responsibility for the stock transactions of which the chief executive is accused.

Information from a source of unquestioned authority was to the effect that in a 3,000 word statement which Governor Sulzer was prevented by his counsel from issuing on Sunday night there was contained the assertion that the Wall street undertakings represented to be those of the governor were in reality business dealings of Mrs. Sulzer.

Had Necessary Votes.

The first roll call indicated that the organization had the votes to carry out its program to impeach the governor before adjournment. One hundred and twenty-two members answered to their names, as follows: Democrats, 85; Republicans, 35; Progressives, 2.

Of the eighty-five Democrats present Majority Leader Levy was confident that seventy-eight—two more than a majority—would vote for the impeachment resolution.

Independent Democrats mustered only a handful. Majority Leader Levy let it be known that he would personally reply to some of the anticipated speeches opposing impeachment. Half a dozen lieutenants expected to aid him. Assemblymen Hinman, Schaap and Gibbs were prepared to lead the attack on the resolution.

Absentees on the first roll call were: Democrats—Brewster, Evans, Hearn, Ingram, Kornobbs and Willmott.

Republicans—Alder, Allen, Brexton, Gillett, Hopkins, Horton, Jones, Knight, Macdonald, Macbold, Pappert, Pemberton, Phillips, Richardson, J. A. Smith, Sullivan, Sweet, Vert and Yeomans.

Progressives—Jude and Volk.

Speaker Smith announced that several of these absentees were known to be in the city and the sergeant at arms was instructed to look for them. Two of the three absent Democrats from Kings were reported to be on the way, and it was said that the one other from Kings was too ill to attend the session.

Hinman Opens Debate.

Upon Mr. Levy's call for the order of business, Assemblyman Hinman opened the debate with an arraignment of the absentees and a repetition of his declaration that he believed the assembly was without the pale of the constitution in considering impeachment at an extraordinary session not called for that purpose.

Every act of Mr. Sulzer's with relation to campaign funds brought out by the Frawley committee, Mr. Hinman asserted in his opening speech, dated back to a period before the governor took his oath of office. Reference was made to a resolution adopted by the assembly in 1853, in which it was declared that no official could be impeached for any offense committed before taking office.

"It may be," said Mr. Hinman, "that the governor would not raise any technicalities, but the members of the assembly owe it to themselves not to violate the constitution. In view of the chaos now prevailing in our state we have an opportunity of bringing those responsible to their senses by treating the matter in a dignified and lofty manner. A clerk in a police court could draw a better indictment than that which is presented for our consideration."

Wire Brings Recruits.

Telegraphic commands to absentees kept flowing over the wires in a steady stream all day bore fruit in the afternoon and evening in the arrival of a squad of assemblymen from New York city.

While deputy sergeant at arms hurried through Albany with summonses to compel every assemblyman in the city to take his desk on the assembly floor and self appointed committees met incoming trains, a throng eclipsing any that had stormed the capitol in the memory of the oldest attendant peered through its stone doorways. Two hours before the time set for calling the assembly to order in night session the first comers had taken their stand outside the railing in the assembly chamber. Hundreds were standing at 7:30 o'clock. At 8 o'clock the great doors to the assembly chamber closed in the face of a grumbling crowd in the corridor. The galleries were packed. Hundreds of women were among the crowd.

WHAT A PHYSICIAN

SAW AT GETTYSBURG.

"As one of the physicians working with the Red Cross organization, I lived and worked among the Scouts during the week of the encampment, and the conviction deepens with reflection that one of the most remarkable things of all was the manner in which the Boy Scouts of America vindicated their motto; they showed that they are prepared, and, at Gettysburg, at any rate, they demonstrated their preparedness by delivering the goods. They were called into service, went into camp, executed their duties under detail to many strange and temporary commanders, and performed innumerable services of helpfulness on their own initiative, and in all circumstances they were a credit to their organization and to their country.

"The real inside explanation of the low mortality among the veterans at Gettysburg is simply that they were not permitted to suffer from confusion, uncertainty, over-exertion and overheating. And here is where the Scouts did the business; they were the boys who found the way to quarters in the dark, who carried the luggage, showed the old fellows how to ventilate the tents, where to find water, where to draw blankets, where to find mess, and carried on their young shoulders just that portion of the burden of living that would have been an overload for the old soldiers.

"At the Red Cross Aid Stations, situated here and there on the battlefield at points where the old soldiers would be most apt to congregate and fight it over again, very important service was rendered by giving water, rest in the shade, and such medical attention as was requisite.

"But it was the Scouts who bore the litters, and rustled for water, finding in true Scout style the best sources, and carrying the heavy palls often for a mile or more to the stations. And it was the Scouts who did guard duty and protected the property of the stations during the nights; no little responsibility that! The stations were lonely spots at night, far from the village and camp, and army blankets are much coveted souvenirs! Thus from the first pailful of water at the Aid Stations to the departure of the train that bore both doctors and Scouts to their homes, the Red Cross organization depended on the boys. For all the careful provisions made by the Army, and the State of Pennsylvania, and the Red Cross, the railroads fell down; and during the whole hour of delay in which a mass of veterans seethed in the boiling sun like a milling herd, while a train was leisurely made up to take them away, much of the good effects of the protective care provided in the camp was undone, and the old men dropped exhausted. But the Scouts were waiting, too, and they gathered the vets up and carried them to the ambulances and then dashed back to their train for home!

"The unanimous sentiment of the Red Cross doctors was regret that there were no Scouts when they were boys, and that their own sons should surely be Scouts!"

EVERY MAN BOSSED BY HIS WIFE.

Is This True?—Philadelphia Jurist Says So—Must Be.

Philadelphia, Aug. 9.—When Judge Barratt was acquainted with the facts surrounding the separation of Michael J. Judge and his nineteen-year-old wife, he at once began to mete out some very good advice, and for fifteen minutes held a heart-to-heart talk with the couple in open court, at the conclusion of which the young pair promised to strain a few points and again live together. "Both of you ought to be spanked and sent home. You are too young to be married, but now that it is done, why don't you make the best of it and stop fighting over trivial matters?" Turning to the young husband and father, the judge continued: "Every man is bossed by his wife."

You may as well learn it now. That is a splendid big baby you have there. Why don't you adjust the differences with your wife and make a home for it? Let bygones be bygones and make love to your wife all over again?"

The thought seemed to please Judge, and after promising to make arrangements at once for a second courtship with his wife left the court room with her and the baby.
