THOUGHT FOR TO-DAY.

A man must not choose his neighbor; he must take his neighbor that God sends him. In him, whoever he be, lies hidden or revealed a beautiful brother. The neighbor is just the man who is next to you at the moment. This love of our neighbor is the only door out of the dungeon of self.—The New Guide.

BUSINESS MEN'S CHRISTMAS EDITION.

With this issue of The Citizen the management takes great pleasure in presenting to its many readers the Business Men's Christmas edition. The paper is filled with attractive advertisements of Honesdale's merchants to whom we desire to express our sincere thanks for their hearty support and co-operation. The merchants made it possible for The Citizen Publishing company to issue this finely illustrated holiday number. The advertisements which have been so carefully written and artistically displayed are full of suggestions for Yuletide purchasers. You will make no mistake in selecting your Christmas presents from Citizen advertisers, and by all means let Wayne county people buy of Wayne county dealers.

In addition to to-day's regular eight pages each subscriber is presented with an eight-page supplement. Be sure that you get both sections. The Christmas reading matter found on the sixteen pages of this issue of The Citizen is the best that money can furnish. The pictures are reproduced from the world's most famous and distinguished artists, many of which are considered masterpieces. The best way to preserve these pictures is to save the whole paper.

There are many feature articles, handsomely illustrated, which furnish excellent reading matter for young and old.

PENDERGAST'S DESERTION.

The most effective argument yet expressed against a continuance of the third party movement in American politics is voiced by William A. Pendergast, controller of New York, in announcing his return to the Republican party. Since Mr. Pendergast has been looked upon as one of Col. Roosevelt's chief lieutenants, to whom was entrusted the duty of presenting the Colonel's name at Chicago, his views should have due weight as undoubtedly being in accord with the sentiments of thousands of other Roosevelt supporters who see the folly of trying to beat the Democrats with a split-up opposition. Mr. Pendergast expresses his views in these well-chosen words:

No one will dispute that the Republican party presents to-day the most cohesive, effective force with which to combat the Democratic party. The question before us is, shall we concentrate our strength upon this most effective fighting force and make a real effort to carry the next Congress or dissipate our strength upon unnecessary candidates and organizations? I for one am emphatically in favor of the first course, and shall work to accomplish it. The time has come when there should be less talk of "Armageddon" and more thought of the future of our own United States.

I trust that the Republican party in the meetings of its national committee and proposed national convention to be held in the near future will exhibit a full appreciation of the requirements of the times. It certainly will do so if it is inspired by the same patriotic spirit which has always brought it success in the past.

In this last paragraph is to be found the meat of the cocoanut. It is true, as Mr. Pendergast says, that thousands upon thousands of Progressives are ready to go back to the old party, but their party must be in position to encourage them to do so. Wise leadership was never more essential in its history than now. Policies in strictest accord with the beliefs of the great rank and file must be adopted. Candidates worthy the support of every true Republican must be selected. Thus and thus only can party success be assured. While the future is rosy with promise for a reunited party, the storm clouds are ever hovering near, ready to gather as they did with such disastrous results in 1912.

The recent expressions of Senator Cummins, in the Saturday Evening Post, might well be adopted as a text-book for those who are at the head of Republican party affairs and who are looking to it to redeem the country from Democratic control.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

PLAN TO REORGANIZE AGRICULTURAL DEPT.

Reorganization of the department of agriculture is foreshadowed in Secretary Houston's first annual report presented to President Wilson. A plan to be submitted to congress in the fiscal estimates for 1916 proposes to carry out the work of the department in five or six main groups, such as research, state relations, rural organization, forest service, weather and regulation. Such a plan, Secretary Houston believes will promote co-ordination.

Plans for redistricting the country for the enforcement of the pure food law are announced and the secretary announces his intention to ask for authority to prepare amendments to the pure food law to improve the food supply, protect the public health and promote uniformity in food legislation.

Free distribution of seeds by congressmen should be discontinued, the secretary recommends. He would conduct in its stead a constructive

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

With the coming of the cold weather and a slight flurry of snow the first few days of the present week, the town began to take on more of a Christmas aspect. In fact it made everybody feel better to see the snow flying. It seemed as if nearly everybody had been waiting for just such weather before going out to do their shopping. Business in Honesdale was quiet last week but not so this week. The business places have had all they could do to attend to the steady stream of trade that comes into their stores. Everything adds to the Christmas spirit and the grouch of the past few weeks of December has been smothered under the smile one sees on the happy, cheery faces of the people on the main street at any period of the day. It is contagious, the smile, and it makes no difference how you feel when you leave your home where perhaps something has gone wrong. It makes no difference if you have the eternal grouch, it all disappears under the spell of this same Christmas spirit if you are disposed to look for it.

Another thing that adds tone to the season is pretty window displays in nearly all the business places. All seem to show more enterprise this year than in former years in the matter of window decorations. There are some displays that would stand the test of Broadway and it is these that proclaim the fact that Honesdale business men are progressively and up to date merchants. They know that their windows are their stock in trade. They realize that it is advertising of a high order. And the progressive merchant believes in advertising as he believes in his Bible. He knows that the shopper invariably looks at his windows and has formed some idea of her purchases therefrom before she enters his store. We did not mean to bring the advertising question in this article, but it is so closely associated with the display of Christmas goods that are being shown in the windows of our leading stores, that it was impossible to resist the temptation.

A word about the business places themselves—veritable havens of delightful things: presents for everybody and above all the Christmas spirit is manifest in the tasty decorations and emblems of the season.

With this issue of The Citizen we extend to all our sincere best wishes and hope that this paper may assist in bringing the joy and happiness of the season to many hearts.

THE RANGE OF THE ARCTIC TURN.

One of the Lecturers at the Farmers' Institute Gave An Interesting Account of Its Travels—A Local Man Has Composed An Ode.

The Arctic Tern makes its nest among the snow on the lands the farthest north that it can go. It stays there during four months of the midnight sun, then finds its way southward during the next two months to Victoria lands, the nearest the South Pole it can get and returns there during the four months of the southern midnight sun, then in the next two months finds its way northward over South America and back to the North Pole, going a distance of 22,000 miles. No other living bird or animal has such a range as this bird has. This fact has only been known for about four years. It feeds on fish from the ocean.

I go to seek the light,
The land of the midnight sun.
Far northward I take my flight
To see the snow flying.
Until endless day has come.

In polar snows make my nest,
Bask in sunshine night and day,
Southward o'er the mountain crest
To polar lands make my way.

Two and twenty thousand miles
I go each year to and fro,
To seek lands of sunshine smiles,
Replenished in the endless snow.

Eight months in eternal sun,
Four short months of day and night,
Is the yearly course I run
On wing, as I take my flight.

Alone I see the North Star
And each year the southern cross,
Of all living things that are
My range is the most.
