WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1892.

The world has had 66,627,842,237, 075,296 inhabitants since the beginning of time.

It is said that the grasshoppers have destroyed nearly 800 young apple trees on the farm of John Watts, in Ferguson township, Clearfield county. The trees were planted only last spring.

Chicago livermen are demanding the modest price of twenty-two dollars a day for the carriages needed for the distinguished guests in the World's Fair dedication parade this month.

The man who laughs occasionally will find life an awful lot easier to get through although the fellow who don't laugh is the one who should get through the soonest. Jollity puts a pneumatic fire on the wheels of time.—Bradford Era.

The country is rid of one more notorious character. Frank Cooley, the leader of the Cooley gang, who has been recognized as an outlaw for about three years, but who has been noted as a tough since his youthful days, was shot and killed by an officer of Fayette county last Sunday afternoon. Cooley fired several times at the officer with a Winchester, but the outlaw's bullets missed their mark, and a bullet from the officer's gun pierced Cooley's heart.

A late scientific investigator has come to the conclusion that the venom of serpents is used by them for digestive purposes, acting as the gastric juices of the stomach do in other animals. It may be therefore that our prejudice against the rattlesnake is unjust. The general impression has always prevailed that he kept his venomous fangs for the sole purpose of jabbing them into his enemies but the fact that he does not know they are loaded ought to be regarded as an extenuating circumstance.—Panxutawney Spirit.

According to the latest and most reliable estimates the population of the Dark Continent is placed at 163,000,000 or fourteen inhabitants to the square mile, while the population of the Three Americas is given at 123,713,000, or eight inhabitants to the square mile. It must be remembered that while explorers tell us of large districts in Africa that are scantily populated, there are also vast regions densely populated, of which but few persons have ever heard. It may in fact be said that only the fringe of the Dark Continent has as yet been reached after 1000 years of intermittent exploration.

We are born: we grow to manhood and womanhood: we marry: we work: we die. The generations come and go, and they come with call and go with significance, if there be not a confident hope and expectation of something to follow, so grand, so sweet so beautiful, that we can look upon it all without misgiving or pain. Faith draws the poison from every grief, takes the sting from every loss, and quenches the fire of every pain, and only faith can do this. "Wisdom, science, power, learning," all these are blind and impotent before the great problem of life as ignorance and weakness. The feeblest girl, believing in God and a hereafter, is an arch-angel by the side of the strongest man who questions her simple faith.—EX.

A young man making a career for himself nowadays, no matter what profession he may choose, has a hard row to hoe at its best. Obstacles are far more numerous in a young man's path than are encouragements. It is unfortunate, but it is true, nevertheless, that there are ten people in this world ready to pull a young man down where there is one to help him up. Competition in all trades and professions is keen; men are alert, and a young man, if he would succeed, cannot afford to loose a single point. Now, in this uneven struggle, if there is one thing the right sort of a young man needs it is home encouragement. In the outer world he is buffeted from post to pillar, and he naturally seeks his home at the close of day thirsting for sympathy in his work which he may not have found outside. If, then, at his father's or mother's fireside, he is continually made to feel that his struggles are distasteful to his closest kin, and is not only made to feel so but is told so, the fight is one which only a few can successfully carry to the end. Home love and sympathetic encouragement is the most healing salve for the wounds of the world, for man as well as for boy, and cruel is that paternal doctrine which would withhold it from a son conscientiously struggling for success in what he honestly feels to be the work for which he is best adapted.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Straight Tip in Few Words.

(Carlisle Volunteer.)

There is little hope for the young man who spends his time and money in saloons or gambling houses. The young man who drinks and gambles cannot be trusted in the employ of responsible firms. Nine out of ten of the banks that fail can trace their failure to illegitimate speculations by the bank officials with the bank's funds. No business institution can afford to keep in their employ the young man who takes pride in drinking and getting drunk. There are plenty of young men in the country who are sober to fill the positions and they are the ones who will be found there. Young men, look well to your walk in life. Look well to your associates. Look well to your habits.

There can be no health for either mind or body so long as the blood is vitiated. Cleanse the vital current from all impurities by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine recovers the wasted energies, strengthens the nerves, and restores health to the debilitated system.
