WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1893.

A rogue can't escape his own meanness any more than a locomotive can run away from its own smoke.

Grover Cleveland's "cabinet makers" have Hon. Geo. A. Jenks, of Brookville, in for Attorney General. The President-elect will hunt around among his timber for a Cabinet a long time and not find a man to fill the position more acceptably and with as much credit as just George A. Jenks of Jefferson county. Mr. Jenks will, doubtless, be a member of Cleveland's Cabinet, or will hold a good position during the next four years' administration. With all Jenks' brilliancy he can hardly read his own hand writing after it gets cold.

Nature seems to delight in disappointing the assiduities of art, with which it would rear legitimate dullness to maturity; and to glory in the vigor and luxuriance of her chance productions. She scatters the seeds of genius to the winds, though some may perish among the stony places of the world, and some be choked by the thorns and brambles of early adversity, yet others will now and then strike root even in the cliffs of the rocks, struggle bravely up into sunshine, and spread over their sterile birth-place all the beauties of vegetation.—Washington Irving.

There are thousands of noble women who are bravely fighting life's battles alone, and far better is this than to give way to despair, or sacrifice themselves in unwise marriages. Many of the fairest pages in Time's history will be given to those whom the world calls "old maids," for their unselfish deeds of love have brought joy to many homes. These usually have buried deep in their hearts thoughts that are too sacred for utterance—thoughts of dear days that have long since passed. These are usually surrounded by fond ones who love them for their real worth, and all are happy together.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has just made a statement of its passenger traffic at the Broad street station, in Philadelphia, which is surprising in its magnitude and it demonstrates more clearly than anything else can the absolute necessity that existed for the enlargement of that station. When the new station was opened, in 1881, less than 100 trains came and went daily; at the present time the schedule calls for 530 trains, an increase that is simply astounding. Ten years ago the number of passengers who arrived and departed from the station was 9,000,000, and was regarded as something enormous; last year it was 20,000,000, or nearly 60,000 persons daily.

Much is being said just now by newspapers, especially those who have the best interest of the laboring class in view and have respect for the law of God, about closing the World's Fair on Sunday, and about the law-makers of Pennsylvania trying to tamper with the Sunday laws of our state. We quote below what Horace Greeley wrote from Switzerland, when he was traveling there some years before his death, on the very important Sunday question: "I could wish you might stand an hour with me, on Sunday morning, in the labor market, in Geneva, and see the troops of dull, tired, saddened-looking laborers, in ragged blouses, unwashed from the grime and sweat of one week's work of seven days, trudging off sluggishly and wearily, like dumb, driven cattle, to the work of the next week of seven days. 'Are these slaves?' you ask. Slaves? Bless you, no. These are freemen. These are voters and citizens in a land of universal suffrage, under the freest government on earth, with an advanced and liberal constitution of the latest French invention, and with the modern improvements. No blow laws here. They once had blow laws in Geneva, but they have laughed them down long ago. This, which you see, is liberty—complete, untrammelled, personal liberty. Every one of these free citizens has a right, a proud, irrevocable right, to work on Sunday, if he chooses, and that is what it ends in for him, and that is what it will end in for you if you choose to make the costly experiment. The working man who may work on Sunday, has got to work on Sunday when work is wanted. The right to rest for each, depends upon the law of rest for all. Think of it, think of it twice, think of it again, then say if you will barter away your birthright, the American Sabbath, the universal privilege of rich and poor, for this miserable French delusion, this continental holiday, through which half the people have to toil that the other half may frolic."

A man with a bad liver often has a good heart.

Every man in a brass band thinks his horn makes the best music.

There is no greater misfortune in life than to have a bad mother.

The easiest thing for a loafer to do is to find fault with busy people.

The devil has no better helper than the man with a fault-finding spirit.

The diamond has the most sparkle, but window glass does the most good.

When people are hired to be good they quit work as soon as the pay stops.

There are men who would be willing to go on a mission to China who let their wives carry in all the stove-wood.

When all people are willing to become as good as they think their neighbors ought to be, the millennium will come.

The devil is not trying very hard to get the man who is mean enough to say insulting things in an anonymous letter.

Reeds Shoe Store.

Every Tenth Sale GIVEN AWAY!

Commencing this Wednesday morning, January 25th, we inaugurate the largest sale of Boots and Shoes!

Ever attempted in the place. Our invoice of last week shows that we have on hand thirty-five hundred dollars worth of Boots and Shoes.

This is by far the largest stock in the place.

We intend to close out the entire line in the following manner:

We have reduced the price on all our Boots and Shoes, as you can well see when you come to buy, as our goods are all marked in plain English figures, that is, you can see what they originally sold for and what you can now buy them at. This is inducement number one.

Number two is as follows:

We intend to give away every tenth pair of Boots or Shoes, no matter what they originally sold for. A strict account will be kept and the lucky tenth buyer gets their purchase free.

Ladies have you ever used TABLE FELT on your dining table? If not, you lack this one item to set a nice table. We have it in two grades.
