WEDNESDAY, MAY 24, 1893.

"They say," is responsible for a great many foul columnies.

In Siam lunatics are buried alive; and in all China there is not one lunatic asylum.

Bad luck comes to men who trust in luck," says some one. It also frequently comes to men who trust in men.

About the only way to make some people happy is to provide for them some sort of imaginary martyrdom.

No man can be a peace-maker who is not first a peace-keeper. You can't stop a fight by asking the other fellow to quit.

The poorest business in which a man can engage is to bear false witness against his neighbor. In the end the slanderer is the one to whom permanent harm comes.

Prof. Henry Drummond says there is no happiness in having or in getting, but only in giving, and half the world is on the wrong scent in the pursuit of happiness. They think it consists in having and getting, and in being served by others. It consists in giving and in serving others.

Profanity is an inexcusable vice. It is an offense against the laws of God and also those of our land, and yet it is a common thing to hear profane language upon our streets daily, yea, hourly. If the law was enforced many people who consider themselves real nice would have to come down with the cash for the privilege of clothing their expressions in profanity.

The attendance at the World's Fair is disappointingly small, only about 18,000 per day on an average since it opened. This has not paid more than one-fourth of the running expenses. No wonder the managers are getting alarmed at the outlook. The total cost of the Exposition up to May 1st is shown by the Treasurer's report to have been $20,250,000, of which $2,000,000 still remains unpaid.

There is uncommon power in the commonplace. Nothing is more commonplace than the infinite blue of the sky, yet one never tires of turning to its quiet and abiding majesty from the vain pomps and changing spectacles of men. Truth, virtue, faithfulness,—these are the sky of the soul, and all brilliant wickedness and all worldly wisdom pass away as vain shadows before the everlasting glory of these simple goodnesses.—Ex.

It is said that using money wisely is more of an art than getting money to use. It requires a larger measure of ability to spend money as it should be spent, than to accumulate it in the first place. Money is a dangerous thing to handle. It ruins many a man through tempting him to its overweening pursuit; and it ruins many another man through tempting him to squander it when gathered, or to depend on it unduly as a means of happiness or of usefulness. The art of spending money aright is commanding more attention than ever before in this country, where the art of accumulating money is already a familiar one.

A cheerful disposition is better than riches, or social position, or any of the rewards of ambition; better than all else save only the character which God loves. But while every one is ready to say yes to this somewhat commonplace proposition, their conduct does not as a rule conform to the affirmative. Not because there is any one who does not wish to be cheerful, "but how can I be," he moans, "when there are so many clouds afloat in my gloomy sky, and when my pathway in life is so full of snares and sorrows?" Well, it can not be denied that on all hands there are sources of grief and no heart is always able, with its firmest resolves to the contrary, to rise above their depressing influence. Nevertheless there is usually a bright side to the darkest prospect, if only it be looked for. The purpose to be cheerful whatsoever one's situation, is half the secret of a happy life; and the whole of it is to possess a cheerful heart out of which this fine purpose grows. No good comes of brooding. Much good comes of making the best of things. The patent recipe for cheerfulness is, living out of ourselves and for others. It is said of the philanthropist Howard that when he felt disposed to an indulgence of "the blues," he lifted off the threatening burden by seizing his hat and going and doing somebody what good he could. To brighten those about us is to become bright ourselves.

Memorial Day.

HEADQUARTERS DEPT. OF PA. G. A. R., PHILADELPHIA, May 1, '93.

COMRADES:—Another year has passed and we are again reminded the time is approaching when we make our annual visitation to the habitations of the dead. More than twenty-eight years have passed since the Angel of Peace spread her wings over our beloved country. In all that time you have never faltered in your devotion to the memory of your departed comrades, and now in the midst of this beautiful season of the year, when all nature is bright, and the sweet perfume of the flowers of spring is around and about us, it were well that we stop at the milestone of 1893, and with solemn thoughts and utterances renew our allegiance to the cause for which so many of our brave comrades went down to their death, or since the eventful days of the war have dropped by the wayside. Let us show by our zeal in the performance of this sacred duty, that we believe it is well for the country to thus honor the memory of her defenders, and in this manner teach an object lesson of patriotism which will not soon be forgotten. For our comrades who have answered the last roll call there are in our hearts words, if we could speak them, that are as Passion flowers, and sentences that are as wreaths of Amaranth. They sleep under the dew and the daisy. To their memory on May 30th, we will drop the tribute of a tear; and on the lowly mounds scattered throughout our great commonwealth let us plant the beautiful flowers of spring time, that will be watered with the tears of the people of a grateful country. As we bend o'er the graves of our comrades, we can recall, as if in sweet communion, their noble, unselfish sacrifices and heroic bearing in the hour of danger, for humanity and civilization. In this spirit of meditation we look about us and see the evidences of prosperity all over this broad land, and whilst we can recall nothing which can arouse a feeling of vindictiveness or sectional passion, we feel proud of the fact that our honored dead were comrades in the grandest volunteer army the world ever knew. Let us, therefore, perform the duties of the day in a reverent spirit, and thus show to the world our appreciation of their efforts in the days of long ago, and for the few remaining days allotted to us let us so live that when we, too, shall have been called, "we may wrap the drapery of our couch about us and lie down like one to pleasant dreams."

By command of Department Commander Thos. G. Sample.

SAM'L P. TOWN, Asst. Adjt. General.

Poorly Organized.

(Brookwayville Record.)

A man prominent in local labor circles is authority for the statement that since active coal developments began, the miners of Jefferson county were never so poorly organized as at the present time. At one time scarcely a mine existed which was without an organization of some kind, and the history of the past has been marked at different periods by a decided spirit of aggressiveness on the part of the labor unions.

The Knights of Labor have been the backbone of all labor unions in this section. Other miners' organizations were instituted and waxed strong, and were auxiliary in some form or other to the K. of L. Assemblies flourished at Brockport, Clarion Mines, Beechtree and Coal Glen, but now all have lapsed. The only mining towns which have an organization at present are Horatio and Anita. An Assembly exists at Clayville, but it is a mixed local, and not confined exclusively to mine workers.

Various causes are assigned for the decline of unionism in this section, but the most likely reason is the depression which has existed in coal mining for the past year or two. While some of the larger collieries have run pretty steadily, the low coal districts have barely made half time. Nothing is so demoralizing in the ranks of labor as idleness, and slack work is always marked by a corresponding decrease in agitation.
