Mr. Dilger writes: "I had a bad attack of the Gripp; after a time caught cold and had a second attack, it settled in my kidneys and liver, and oh! such pain and misery in my back and legs. The physicians' medicine and other things that I used made no impression, and I continually grew worse until I was a physical wreck and given up to die."

At Washington, D.C. About 30 Persons Killed, and Many More Seriously Hurt. Ford's Old Theatre in Ruins.

Another tragedy, less national in character, but involving the loss of many more lives and much more human suffering, has stained the walls of old Ford's Theatre, in Washington, D. C., where Abraham Lincoln was assassinated by John Wilkes Booth in April, 1865.

The theatre, which has been used for offices by the War department, and in which almost 500 clerks and others were at work, collapsed Friday morning, killing between 20 and 30 and injuring between 50 and 60 people.

P. McCormack, eyes injured and shocked by fall.

The superintendent of the Emergency Hospital says none of the men at the hospital will die. In addition to the injured reported, many who were able to proceed to their homes were hurt more or less badly.

CAUSED BY AN EXCAVATION. Ford's Theatre stood on Tenth street, northwest, between E and F streets, and not far from Pennsylvania avenue. It had been condemned years ago and has been repaired, dropped up and renovated from year to year.

An excavation for an electric light plant was being made in the cellar of the structure, a three-story affair, and, according to the best information obtainable, the workmen had dug beneath the foundation supports in the front of the building, weakening them to such an extent that the walls gave way before they could be jacked. This explanation for the cause of the accident is the only one advanced, but it seems somewhat strange in view of the fact that the top floor gave way first.

Men who were in the building say the crash came without warning. Those on the top floor were suddenly precipitated to the floor below and the weight of falling timbers and furniture carried the second and first floors with it.

Fortunately only the forward half of the floors gave way. The outer edges of the floors and the rear part of the structure remained intact. The walls did not fall. The hour of the disaster was very shortly after the departments had settled down for the day's work. The workmen, whose operations under the building were the immediate cause of the catastrophe, had been tinkering upon it for two hours or more. Half an hour earlier and few lives would have been lost.

HISTORY OF THE BUILDING.

USED AS A CHURCH, THEATRE, ARMY MUSEUM AND THEN AS A DEATH TRAP. Upon the site of the ruined building years ago a handsome church was built by the Rev. O. D. Brown, who was for years chief clerk in the General Postoffice. For some reason it was marked for sale, and in 1857, John T. Ford purchased the property and rebuilt the church into Ford's Theatre. The means to do it were obtained by subscriptions of $1,000 each from 12 or 15 well-known citizens. From its opening night the theatre had been successful. All the theatrical stars of that time appeared there, and the stock company was of a most excellent character. A continued success was proclaimed when on the fatal night of April 14, 1865, the assassination of President Lincoln occurred within its walls.

Afterward the building came into the possession of the United States and was used to store the gaudy relics that constituted the Army and Navy Medical Museum. Here for years reposed the few fragments of the bones of the spine and part of the brain of Guiteau, the assassin of President Garfield. This museum was removed to a building prepared for it and the old theatre was patched up into an office building.

A RECOVERY IN TRADE.

A Relief from the Business Depression of Last Week. R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: The severe depression of a week ago which culminated in very tight money, and numerous failures, has been followed by some recovery. Reports that definite action by Congress on the money question has been assured have done much to cause the better feeling, which indicates that apprehension of the future rather than present difficulty causes much of the trouble.

The Treasury gold reserve is gaining, exports of gold have been arrested. Foreign exchange has fallen, with dealer money here and reduction of bank rates at London, and banks at Chicago have rallied with success against the runs which appeared threatening. Though no radical change in underlying conditions has occurred, there is more hopefulness and some recovery from the extreme contraction of credit.

Wheat has gone below 70 here and 60 at Chicago, receipts being 400,000 bushels daily and exports 200,000 bushels. Corn has fallen 20 with large receipts, oats 10, pork $1.75 per barrel, lard 65c, and hog 10c per 100 lbs. But oil is 50c stronger and coffee unchanged. Cotton is 10c higher at better foreign buying. In wool, sales are remarkably small. In low grade cottons there has been some advance, but not in finished goods, and buyers are slow.

The financial outlook is not helped as yet by foreign trade, as imports continue heavy while exports are still below last year's. The failures for the week have been 322 in the United States, against 108 for the same week last year, and 27 in Canada against 24 last year.

A Bird Story.

Will you allow me to add a touching instance of courage to your pleasant bird stories? Early one morning last summer I was called to the window by a great noise among the bird people of the garden, and saw the following scene. A young blackbird was standing fascinated by a cat, who was crouched under a bush ready to spring on him. An old blackbird, on an ilex close by, was uttering loud and agitated cries, and there was a general sizzle of anger and sympathy from other birds all around. After a few seconds the cat sprang on the young bird and held him down. At that instant the old bird came down on them. There was a moment's struggle, the bird beating her wings violently in the cat's face, and, I think, pecking at her eyes; then the cat jumped back to her bush, the young bird made off with long hops, and the old one flew up to the ilex, amid a jubilant chorus of commendation which lasted quite some minutes. I never saw this before, though I have seen a robin come quite close to a cat stalking another bird and scold and flap her wings in her face.

Commerce of Long Island Sound.

"The American coast has many fair spots, but its gilt edge, so to speak, is the country bordering on Long Island Sound," said Captain Charles Hervey Townsend, of Connecticut. The captain is famous as the projector and persistent promoter of the great breakwater now being constructed by the Government at New Haven. "It is a grand work," said he, "and will be of immense benefit to the country I have just eulogized. The break water will be about two and a half miles long, and will give us a roadstead of ten square miles, in which the fleets of the world may float securely. "At low tide there will be eight fathoms of water. About one mile of the work is finished, and to complete it will cost, according to the estimates, $2,200,000. Its great utility will be appreciated when I tell you that the value of the shipments to New York via Long Island Sound are greater than the total of that which comes in by way of Sandy Hook. The commerce that finds its way into New York through this eastern approach surpasses any other waterway traffic in America. Along this very Sound in the not distant future, it is within the bounds of reason to believe that 10,000,000 people will have homes."—Washington Post.

The Parson's Knowing Appeal.

In a church in the north of England on a recent Sunday morning a clergyman, appealing for subscriptions for the steeple fund, addressed his congregation as follows: "Now, my dear friends, I hope you will subscribe handsomely, as we are earnestly in need of funds; but before you do so I wish to say you must be just before you are generous. Therefore, brethren, if any of you owe money, pray think of your private claims first." It is hardly necessary to add that every member of the congregation gave his quota to the collection.
