"There is no mansion in heaven for the man who treats his wife like a mule and then tries to get a divorce because she does not prove to be an angel."

One possible stimulus which the teacher of children should never employ is that of sarcasm. It is possible that a bit of biting wit may sometimes be employed on an adult with really good effect; but it can never be so employed on children. The teacher who permits himself to indulge in a sarcastic allusion to a scholar's mistake, or to his lack of attainment or capacity, destroys in a single moment a greater part of his slowly acquired influence over that scholar, and plants an arrow in the child's heart which the teacher himself may never be able to remove.

Dr. Schenffer, superintendent of public instruction, in speaking of the act of May 23rd, 1893, designating the third Tuesday of Feb. and the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November as a legal holiday, says: "The purposes mentioned in this act have special references to the maturity of commercial paper, the acceptance and payment of bank checks, drafts and promissory notes, etc., as expressly set forth in the act itself. I am clearly of the opinion that the several boards of school directors and controllers are not required to close the public schools in their respective districts on the days designated as election days."

A popular English Non-conformist preacher was residing with a farmer in Glasgow, while on a visit to that city, whither he had gone on a deputation from the Wesleyan Missionary Society. After dinner, in reply to an invitation to partake of some fine fruit, he mentioned to the family a curious circumstance concerning himself, viz., that he had never in his life tasted an apple, pear, grape, or indeed any kind of green fruit. The fact seemed to evoke considerable surprise from the company; but a cautious Scotchman of a practical, matter-of-fact turn of mind, and who had listened with much unconcern, dryly remarked: "It's a peety but ye had been in Paradise, and there might nae have been any faa."

A sixteen-year-old girl reads a lecture to the young men in a Lincoln county paper. She exclaims: "Why do the young men of Edgecomb do so much loafing? Go to work! Push ahead! I am but a young girl. I have clothed myself, have money in the bank, and am only sixteen years old. I lay up more money every year of my life than any boy or young man within a radius of three miles of my home. When they get a dollar they go to a dance and go home a dollar out. My father is able to support me, but I choose to support myself. I advise all girls to cut clear of those loafing boys. Give them a wide berth, and never marry a man unless he is able to support you. And never put your arm through the handle of a rum jug."

You are made to be kind, boys, generous, magnanimous. If there is a boy in school who has a club foot, don't let him know you ever saw it. If there is a poor boy with ragged clothes, don't talk about rags in his hearing. If there is a lame boy, assign him some part in the game that doesn't require running. If there is a hungry one, give him part of your dinner. If there is a dull one, help him to get his lesson. If there is a bright one, be not envious of him; for if one boy is proud of his talents, and another is envious of them, there are two great wrongs, and no more talent than before. If a larger or a stronger boy has injured you, and is sorry for it, forgive him. All the school show by their countenances how much better it is than to have a great fuss.

Some one has said that "every face ought to be beautiful at forty;" and another that "no old person has a right to be ugly, because he has had all his life in which to grow beautiful." That is to say life's opportunities of nobleness, or even forty years of opportunity, if well used, are enough to make so much beauty within that it cannot help coming through to the surface in graceful habits of the nerves and muscles. The transfiguration of a pleasant smile, kindly lightings of the eyes, restful lines of self-control about the lips, pure shinnings of the face as great thoughts kindle inwardly—these things no parent makes inevitably ours, and no fitful week or two of goodness gives them, and no habitual nobleness and graciousness within; and this will give them all. Nor does a wise man think he knows another till he has watched the quick expressions which flit across the face unconsciously.

Gone to Rest.

DuBois, Pa., October 24th, 1893. After an illness of seven months, Sadie Bowers sinks to rest. Notwithstanding all the kind treatment she received from her many friends in DuBois and elsewhere, she obeyed, willingly the summons that came at mid-afternoon of the above date; a summons that we all must obey ere long. Sarah A. Bowers was born in Clarion county, Pa., near Rimersburg. With her parents came to Jefferson county when a small girl; was converted sometime afterwards at the Moore church, near Emeraldville, Pa.; never was known to speak a harsh word to her parents or her husband during her lifetime; had a smile and kind look for every one she met. Her parents, brothers and sisters, as well as her husband, will feel the shock by her death. She bore her affliction with patience and christian fortitude, let her light shine during her lifetime and on her deathbed preached sermons to those around her. She never seemed to tire talking about her blessed Saviour during her sickness. It is her wish that something be done for the good neighbors she had during her sickness. The best medical aid was summoned during her illness with no avail. Her husband took her to New York city to a hospital with the hope of her recovery.

It seems hard for her husband, father and mother, as well as brothers and sister, to part with Mrs. Bowers, but they say God's will be done in all things. Sadie set her house in order in health, in affliction warned her husband, as well as all her friends and acquaintances, to meet her in heaven; in death she gained the victory over all sin and is praising God with a harp in her hand and songs of praise on her lips that will last throughout eternity. A City of Roof Gardens.

The majority of the houses in Buena Ayres have but one story, whose flat roof serves all the purposes of Yankee lawns and door yards. While the patios are frequently utilized as dining and sitting rooms, it is the universal custom to promenade in the cool of the day on the house-tops, to sit there at morning and evening enjoying the refreshing breezes, extensive views and varied panoramas in the street below. The children find their favorite playground on the roof. There the nurses bring their infant charges, the seamstress her sewing and the maid her mistress' bedraggled finery to put in order again. The clothes are dried and aired and ironed atop, and during the "heated term" of this dewless latitude thousands bring up their beds and sleep with starry sky for a counterpane.—Philadelphia Record.

Too Sweeping. After his return from his first lecturing tour in this country, the late Matthew Arnold visited old Mrs. Proctor, the widow of the poet, "Barry Cornwall," and mother of Adelaide Proctor. Mrs. Proctor, who was then 80 years old, in giving Mr. Arnold a cup of tea asked him:

"And what did they say about you in America?"

"Well," replied the literary autocrat, "they said I was conceited, and they added that my clothes did not fit me."

"Well, now," retorted the old lady, "I think they were mistaken about the clothes."—New York Mail and Express.

The Ruling Passion. Mr. Theosoph—Speaking of the mysterious, I knew an adept who predicted that he would be taken sick on a certain day, at a certain hour, and would die exactly 2 hours and 10 minutes later. Everything occurred just as he foretold. What do you think of that?

Mr. Hardhead—He must have been a New York man who had lived in Jersey and had become accustomed to doing everything on schedule time.—New York Weekly.
