The Tower of Silence.

The Parsees will not burn or bury their dead, because they consider a dead body impure, and they will not suffer themselves to defile any of the elements. They therefore expose their corpses to vultures, a method revolting, perhaps, to the imagination, but one which commends itself to all those who are acquainted therewith. And, after all, one sees nothing but the quiet, white-robed procession (white is mourning among the Parsces) following the bier to the Tower of Silence. At the entrance they look their last on the dead, and the corpse bearers-a caste of suchcarry it within the precincts and lay it down, to be finally disposed of by the vultures which crowd the tower. And why should the swoop of a flock of white birds be more revolting than what happens at the grave?

Meanwhile, and for three days after, the priests say constant prayers for the departed, for his soul is supposed not to leave the world till the fourth day after death. On the fourth day there is the Unthanna ceremony, when the large sums of money are given away in memory of the departed. The liturgy in use is a series of funeral sermons by Zoroaster,

Of superstitions, the Parsees have had more than they retain. Connected with burial is the popular conception as to the efficacy of a dog's gaze after death. Dogs are sacred, and supposed to guide the souls of the dead to heaven, and to ward off evil spirits; hence it is customary to lead a dog into the chamber of death. that he may look at the corpse before it is carried away to the Tower.-The Nineteenth Century.

Animals-Deceivers Ever.

Swindling and deceit are known among animals. In military stables borses are known to have pretended to be lame in order to avoid going into military exercise. A chimpan-zee had been fed on cake when sick; after his recovery he often feigned coughing in order to procure dainties. The cuckoo sometimes lays its eggs in the sparrow's nest, and to make the deception surer it takes away one of the sparrow's eggs. Animals are conscious of their deceit, as shown by the fact that they try to operate secretly and noiselessly; they show a sense of guilt if detected; they take precautions in advance to avoid discovery; in some case; they manifest regret and repentance.

Thus, bees which steal often hesi-tate before and after their exploits, as if they feared punishment. Someone described how a monkey com-mitted theft: while he pretended to sleep the animal regarded him with besitation, and stopped every time his master moved or seemed on the point of awakening. Such, and many more well-known facts, may be due to fear of punishment, which natur-ally follows a misdeed, just as is observed among habitual thieves.

A River Flowing from the Sea.

On the African shore, near the Gulf of Aden, and connecting the lake of Assal with the main ocean, may be found one of the most wonderful rivers in the world. This natural curiosity in the shape of a river does not flow to but from the ocean toward the inland. The surface of Lake Assal is nearly .00 feet below the sea level, and it is fed altogether by this paradoxical river, the latter being about twenty-two miles in length. It is said to be a wonderful fact that this river of immense volume, especially at high tide, fur-nishes exactly enough water to counter: alance the extraordinary evaporation of the lake, and that in quence the lake's surface remains at a uniform level year after year -New York Dispatch.

November Fire Loss. The fire loss of the United States and Canada for the month of November amounts o $11,493,000. Although this is less than he sums chargenike against the same month in 1891 and 1892, the current year promises o make a record of fire waste unparalleled since the year of the Chicago fire and out of til proportion with the country's growth. The losses in New York City for the month just closed show a total of $231,-100. The losses for the action of $200.

The losses for the entire year of 1890 were 100,568,345; for 1891, $137,716 150; for 1892, 132,704,700. As 1895 has already piled up i total of $144,340,400, it is probable that the
