Lightning is reflected for 150 to 200 miles, and thunder may be heard from 20 to 25 miles.

Happy is that father who has so conducted himself in the sight of his children as to win and retain their affection and respect. It is well that men should think of those who are of their household and so live as to set forth a worthy example.

These are days when it behooves those who would avoid pneumonia and kindred dangers to exercise extreme caution. Don't stand on the streets, avoid sudden changes of temperature, take a cold vigorously in hand the moment you feel it coming on.

It would make the hearts of many of our good, pious fathers and mothers ache, remarks an exchange, could they but see the way their sons are going to destruction through bad habits in this age. Gambling with cards, dice, and the flowing bowl are some of the most prominent vices that pave the way. But it is a difficult matter to convince parents that their dear boy is other than a "saint" until it is too late, too late.

The truth remains just the same that the effects of the hard times is felt in all sections, more or less, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, even if a few of our exchanges do call newspapers "calamity howlers" that make mention of the fact. When a man's larder and coal bin are empty and no work to refill them, it is the greatest of folly to try to convince him by long-winded editorials that times are as good as they have ever been. The long army of unemployed in the cities and the cry for bread, speak in unmistakable language.

The Pittsburg Times is making another special offer to the popular school teachers as follows: The public school teachers who receive the highest number of votes will be given vacation trips by the Times during August of 1894, as follows: The five teachers who are voted most popular will be sent, each with a companion to be chosen by the winner, to the Yellowstone National Park, to the St. Lawrence river and lake regions of New York, to Boston and the White Mountains, to Duluth and the copper regions of the great Northwest, and to the Catskill mountains. The 50 teachers who receive the next highest number of votes will be sent to Atlantic City or Cape May. All will be splendidly entertained, and the Times will bear every cent of the expense. Twenty-five winners will be chosen from Allegheny county; 20 from Pennsylvania, outside of Allegheny county; three from Ohio, and one each from West Virginia and Maryland.

"Impossible," as the term is here employed, means that which is supposed to lie beyond the boundaries of the possible. The inventor is steadily, persistently and greatly enlarging the area of the possible, as thus understood. He is conquering the dark and dubious domain of the "impossible." The world of 1894 would be a world full of miracles to men who left in 1794 could they revisit their old terrestrial home. Such visitors would find the changes so vast and so radical that an entire recast of their habits of life would be a condition precedent to anything like enjoyment. If we go back to the days beyond the steamship and the railroad, to the days of the flint, steel and the tinder-box; to the era of tallow candles and huge wood fires; to the time when the plumber took little or no part in the construction of houses; when the shoemaker and the tailor itinerated and the school-master "boarded round;" when there were no dailies and but few weekly papers; when the telegraph had not been dreamed of; when the art of printing was comparatively in its infancy; when factories were unknown and simplicity ruled in all things—in short, if we go back to the days of our great-grandfathers, we are able to understand how much of the "impossible" has surrendered to the assaults of invention. And yet we often hear regrets that "the good old days" are gone. There are those who seem to lament the progress of the nineteenth century; those who gaze longingly, lovingly backward, professing to regard the old as better than the new. Human sympathy flows with a broader current with every passing year. More work has been accomplished in the fields of charity and benevolence in our century than had been attempted in the five centuries next preceding ours. Reforms of every kind calculated to alleviate suffering, spread knowledge, promote virtue, and to exalt and purify, have been and are the great features of nineteenth century life.

One of our exchanges offers the following sensible suggestions, and considering the prevalence of the grip, will be well for our school teachers to bear them in mind: "Teachers should be careful in opening windows in school rooms. They should never open them in a way to cause a rush of cold air over the scholars. The temperature of the scholars also varies. Some can stand cold drafts and others can't. This is also a matter that must not be lost sight of. Teachers who are moving about and whose blood is kept warm by their activity must not make the mistake that the scholars who are kept in their seats and are physically inactive, can stand as much cold as they themselves. Half the colds taken by scholars at school is through the imprudent throwing open of windows by the teachers."
