Organized Last Week.

A Ministerial Association was formed in this place last Monday. The association will meet every other Monday. All the ministers within a radius of twelve miles have been invited to become members and attend the meetings. Such meetings will certainly be interesting and profitable to all who attend if conducted in the right way. It should be the means of uniting the ministry to do battle against the various forms of wickedness that stalks abroad in this vicinity.

Ended with a Fight. Reynoldsville and Rathmel teams at tempted to play a game of ball at this place last Saturday afternoon which ended in the beginning of the seventh inning with bloodshed, and for a short time had a riotous aspect. A young man of Rathmel stationed himself at first base and began coaching. He was requested to desist which he refused to do and blood was spilt as a result. The two combatants were not badly used up. The fight broke up the game. The score was 13 to 3 in favor of Reynolds-

Snake Charmer.

Prof. Joe Obey, the greatest snake charmer in Reynoldsville, gave a free exhibition of his wonderful charm over a slimy reptile on the street last Wednesday evening to a very small audience of boys and girls and several women. One woman was horrified to see the colored man's performance. Joe had a garter snake about 12 Inches long which he would curl up, put it into his mouth and close his lips. Not many moons ago a large black snake was on exhibition at Hotel Dillman and when Joe could get a little snake-bite- preventative inside his skin he would take the snake out of its den and perform with it.

Co., that cannot be settled by the Union where the differences may exist. President McBride and a member of the National Executive Board will hold mass meetings at various places in this district within the next week. Reynoldsville will be one of the places.

Team Runaway.

Henry Priester was driving Priester Bros.' roan team down Main street Monday afternoon when the pin in one of the single-trees dropped out and the single-tree fell onto one horse's heels. This frightened the horses and they started to run down Main street. Mr. Priester was sitting on the rear part of the wagon and had no box on the wagon and could not hold the horses as he had nothing to brace himself against. The horses ran into a buggy in which two old men were riding and they were thrown out and were both injured, one in the back and the other on his head. Mr. Price ter was thrown off the wagon and dragged some distance by one of the hind wheels. He escaped without serious injury, but had his right arm badly skinned.

Water and Eggs.

An umbrella mender who had been in Reynoldsville several days indulged in "tangle foot" Monday and about noon decided the town needed a little excitement and he forwith proceeded to dispel the quietness in front of Schultze's store by getting a barrel, sticking a small flag on top of the barrel, mounting a chair and began using his lung powers in making a speech, which, however, was short. The speaker claimed to be an old soldier. He said Grover Cleveland and Hoke Smith owe him a sension. While giving vent to his rievances and making a show of himself in general a bucket of cold water scattered "galley west" on the speakers head and ran into his mouth and down his spinal column. This was such a shock to the man, especially getting the water into his mouth, that his eloquence deserted him and he almost forgot his subject. He mounted the chair again and was making an attempt to gather his stray thoughts when stale eggs were flying through space and exploding near the speakers' stand. That was too much even for an umbrella fixer. The man succeeded in creating an excitement for a half hour among the small boys who were plaguing him. The man got a little boisterous and when Mr. Addlesperger told him to keep quiet the fellow said, "Reynoldsville wants some excitement."

Uncalled for Censure.

A few of the good people of Reynoldsville have been unduly exercised during the past week because we gave place in our columns last week to a series of resolutions handed us for publication by a committee from the U. M. W. of A., said resolutions commenting adversely on a sermon preached by Rev. Johnson, pastor of the Presbyterian church The object of a newspaper is to give the news and every editor measures his suc cess by his ability in furnishing the news, and so any communication handed us that is couched in decent language and free from personalities and immoral taint, we feel under obligations to publish. Following this rule when said resolutions were handed in and carefully scrutinized we could see nothing in them to preclude their publication. Mr. Johnson is a public man and he expressed himself publicly, and judging from his response, which will be found in this issue, and from a private conversation we had with him, he does not censure us for giving space to the resolutions. It must be remembered that a newspaper is published in the interest of the public, and is not a family affair. We believe those who have censured us do not understand the position a newspaper holds in the community where published, nor have they thoughtfully considered the matter unbiased.

New Proprietor.

For five years Thomas Green and John Marks Conser have been proprietors of Hotel Belnap, but they are no longer responsible for the treatment the guests at that hostelry will receive, as they have sold their interest to L. S. McClelland, formerly a clerk in the company store at this place. Green & Conser are both pleasant men and they done a good business while proprietors of Hotel Belnap. The new proprietor will certainly keep up the reputation of street into which they expect to move as soon as the houses are finished.

Too Much Sun and Gas.

Last Friday just as Old Sol was nearing the zenith Miss Verna Bing was overcome by the heat and fainted. She had washed her hair and was standing in the sun to dry it when she lost control of her mental faculties. There is danger in even washing the hair. Not long ago Miss Roberta Ayers of this place washed her hair and held it over gas fire to dry. There was a flash, scream and Roberta was minus enough hair to put up in the latest fashion While Miss Bing did not loose her hair she, like Miss Ayers, almost lost her

An Impostor.

REYNOLDSVILLE, July 31st. MR. EDITOR:-It is seldom that any citizen has to take up the pen to warn the citizens of any place who are charitably disposed against an impostor. There is a man in Reynoldsville who is collecting money ostensibly for the purpose of defraying his expenses for hospital treatment for a burned arm, when all collections he makes are used for illegitimate purposes. He uses considerable of the money contributed by the generous public for beer. I stand ready to prove the assertions I make in this ommunication. H. C. FEATH.

Worthy of Notice.

When any body buys shoes of Henry A. Reed, "the shoe man," and are not perfectly fitted or satisfied they can and do receive their money back as freely as it was taken. This is the honest way to carry on business. He aims to please every customer and says he would rather miss a dozen sales than misrepresent one, for he is here to stay and realizes that only through honest methods and true representations he can hold the large trade he now has.

Comfortable, stylish and good wearing shoes, sold by Henry A. Reed "the shoe man." REV. JOHNSON'S RESPONSE.

To Local Union No. 542, U. M. W.

Your resolutions published in last week's issue of THE STAR both delighted and disappointed me. They delighted me, first, because they show that you have an interest in your own honor and welfare; and, second, because they were a virtual invitation to me to write you this letter. I was disappointed, first, because your committee did not visit me; second, because your committee failed to sign their names to the resolutions; third, because I have been entirely misrepresented in the whole body of resolutions; fourth, because your haste and indiscretion may entall cruel suffering on my wife in her present weak physical conditions should she learn of the misunderstanding between us. So far as my personal feelings are concerned, I am not in the least annoyed by your resolutions, for I rather expected some of you to get angry; but I believed then, and still believe, that when you understand me, you will say I have proven myself one of your truest friends. I fear the members of your committee were not present to hear my sermon, if they were, then I am astounded beyond all measure that they should have so misunderstood me. I have but little doubt that whoever circulated the report of my sermon came to the church to hear the capitalist slandered and the laborer praised. He expected of me what I had no right to do, and, therefore, was disappointed. You believe it my duty to denounce the sins of capitalists and corporations. I believe it also; and had your committee attended my church on the evening of July 8, 1894, and on one or two occasions previous to that, its members might have understood clearly enough that I had no sympathy with those who "oppress the bireling in his wages." But do you not believe also that I should reprove the laborer for his sins? I do: and, therefore, on the morning of the 15th of July I called attention to a number of the sins of the laboring man, and especially those that have been noticeable during the recent strikes all over the country. I did not think it wise to delay this sermon until everybody had forgotten about these strikes, that would make the sermon old and stale, entirely devoid of power; but I believed that it should be delivered at the time selected. when people would be in a mood to hear it, and its truths might come forth with burning force. To reprove sin after it has been forgotten by those who committed it, is as foolish as to administer medicine to a man after he is dead; and to reprove so mildly that no one knows that he has been reproved is extremely foolish and weak. Now my dear brothers, I would reprove the sins of both the capitalist and laborer even though I were sure the next moment would bury me a mile deep under the bitterest imprecatory resolutions. But I said you will agree with me as soon as you un-derstand me, therefore hear my defense: My sermon opened with the declaration that I was not taking sides with either Capital or Labor, but as a minister of Christ was about to point out the sins of one party as I had of the other. I then spoke highly of the orderly conduct of the miners of our community during the recent strike, but regretted the house. Green and Conser are build- that we heard so many expressions of sympathy for the lawless outbreaks in other places. Referring to the strike at Chicago I mentioned a number of acts that were self evident transgressions of the law (Judge Grosseuup's recent charge to the special U.S. grand jury will more than bear me out in my statements). I mentioned also the very unwise step of Mr. Debs in reproving the President for sending troops to Chicago; and added that very probably one of our foolish popular customs had en couraged him to make the blunder. We American people are in the habit of senselessly criticising and condemning the president of the United States and other officials who do not belong to our party. When sensible men do this in their homes and places of business, it encourages the less thoughtful classes to be still bolder in their denunciations, and these in turn encourage others, and so down to the criminal classes whose denunciations at last end in anarchy. Now, my brethren, if that declaration involves the laboring man it also involves every other American citizen. and if I am to be denounced, the whole country ought to do it. At another time I referred to a gentleman whom had personally reproved for not doing better by his men. This man answered me be by saying, "What's the use, these men are ignorant and would only spend their money over the bar for drink anyway." I then pointed out the sad neglect of education in our own and other communities, and dwelt on the awful habit so many laboring men have of squandering money for drink, while their families suffer. If laborers would acknowledge their faults more readily, much more could and would be done for I did not say in this sermon or in any other, that laborers had no right to organize for self protection. I believe they have; and if they failed to organize, I should be tempted to undertake that work for them immediately. I did say, though, that they had abused their rights in imposing on themselves and the public (Continued on 4th page.)
