 WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1894.

An independent local paper, published every Wednesday at Reynoldsville, Jefferson Co., Pa., devoted to the interests of Reynoldsville and Jefferson county. Non-political, will treat all with fairness, and will be especially friendly towards the laboring class.
 Subscription price $1.50 per year, in advance. Communications intended for publication must be accompanied by the writer's name, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith. Interesting news items solicited. Advertising rates made known on application at the office in Arnold's Block.
 Lengthy communications and change of advertisements should reach this office by Monday noon.
 Address all communications to C. A. Stephenson, Reynoldsville, Pa.
 Entered at the postoffice at Reynoldsville, Pa., as second class mail matter.

A kind heart is a better possession than a "tobacco heart."
 A phrenologist says that you can tell a woman's character by her chin.
 There is some talk of erecting a $25,000 monument to the late Gov. Andrew G. Curtin in public square at Bellefonte. It is to be surmounted with a figure of Gov. Curtin. Financial assistance has already been tendered by various soldier organizations of the state.

A woman at thirty-five has enthusiasm without gush; she discriminates and is quite sure what she likes, writes Elizabeth B. Custer. The abruptness of youth has given way to the softening and subduing graces of maturity. She has still passionate intensity of heart and great capability of devotion, but she has reserve and daws do not peck at her sleeve.
 A lady in one of our cities called on a fortune-teller recently and was told that a number of disasters would overtake her; that some enemies would try to take her life and the lives of her husband and children. She was terribly frightened, and in a few days was seized with acute mania, and now is "bound down in bed and handcuffed, having for five days refused to eat anything." It must be a weak mind that will believe a fortune-teller. It is not wonderful when weak minds are seized with acute mania. No being in the universe, except the Almighty, can foreknow absolutely contingent events. Yet most of the twaddle that the fortune-tellers and clairvoyants utter relates to events of which no cause exists in the universe at the time they make the prophecy, as they depend upon the free action of persons.

The Brookville Democrat wisely remarks: "Every person born into the world has a place to occupy, large or small. How big a place they shall fill depends largely upon themselves, and the effort they shall make. There is plenty of room, and no one need fear they will appropriate too much space. If a man or woman wishes to be missed when they leave the world they must learn that only those are missed who have filled a wide space in it. Not every one can be great, or learned, or wise, or celebrated, in the ordinary sense; yet many can, by effort, make themselves so useful, and accomplish so much good, that when their life ends everyone about them will feel that they have sustained a loss. If, when a man or woman dies, no one feels a keen sense of loss at their departure, that life has been a failure."
 Man's commission is to subdue nature. He asserts his sovereignty over every department of life. Scientists heave the lead in deep sea soundings; map the floor of the Atlantic; foretell the birth of the tornado; interpret the hieroglyphics carved on mountain summit and on sandy strata; pursue the comet through the space of ether; reckon upon the age of the sun; in every motion finding an idea, in every form a purpose, in every event the token of a plan. The power of man's thought is felt by the sea, owned by the sun, and humbly acknowledged by the winds of heaven. Man has risen rocks and ransacked forests, tunneled mountains and bridged gulfs; he has raced with time, chained the lightning to its throne, and equipped them for missions of mercy, wisdom and wealth. Who can reckon upon the results secured by man's study of science? From the hyssop and moss, from the invisible that brood in flower-cup and quaff honeydew, on through ascending ranks of moving, living, thinking, being, has science urged her researches. She has placed mind upon the rack and drawn forth its secrets; she has dived beneath ocean's surface and returned with pearls wonders from coral palace and sea-grove bower; she has turned the star-powers of heaven into revolving and resplendent worlds and systems. She has wielded the sledge, pointed the needle, printed the page, heaved the granite, and propelled the engine of factory and locomotive. There is not a beast of the forest or farm, not a force of nature, visible or remote, which does not already own the sway of man, and yet notwithstanding all the above facts, how aimless, worthless and vile are many of the beings called man? It is not necessary to go outside of the borough limits of our own town to find specimens of the most corrupt nature, whose highest aim and ambition in life is to smoke, drink and carouse around. Such lives are worse than useless; better had they never been born. Man was created for higher purposes.

Few people in this neighborhood know how nearly Ex-Sheriff J. J. Young came to having his hair raised by Indians. He was in Custer's command and was first sergeant of a company. His time expired, however, a few weeks before the Custer massacre, and he came home. His company was in the famous battle of the Little Big Horn, and every man of them was killed. And it is scarcely probable that Mr. Young would be peregrinating around town to-day had it not been for the fortunate circumstance that his time expired before the bloody massacre.—Punxsutawney Spirit.

 An Englishman, who, when she was a girl, Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett really looked upon as her enemy, turns out, upon mature reflection, to be the man who of all others, most influenced the famous author's life. Mrs. Burnett has written out the story of her curious friendship for The Ladies' Home Journal, which periodical will publish it as the initial article in its series of "The Man Who Most Influenced Me," to which six of the most famous American and English women will contribute.

Two for One.
 We are making a special offer to each of our readers paying a year's subscription to the STAR in advance, and to all new subscribers paying in advance, we will give them the best local paper in Jefferson county and will give them free, either the Woman's Friend or American Farmer, for one year. The two papers above mentioned are excellent monthly papers and the subscription price of each is 50c. a year. This offer is made only to those in Pennsylvania.

Advice to the Public.
 Did you ever write an article for a newspaper? No. Then why do you pick up a paper and after glancing over it, throw it aside with the remark, "there is nothing in it worth reading." You think you are a great newspaper critic don't you?
 You are of the opinion that you can give the editor pointers that he has never dreamed of as to how to conduct a paper successfully. And yet if you were called upon to furnish a column of readable news each day for a week you couldn't do it to save your life.—Washington (Ind.) Democrat.

TRUSTEE'S SALE
 OF VALUABLE
REAL ESTATE!
 By virtue of an order of the Orphan's Court of Jefferson county, Pennsylvania, to me directed, in the estate of said late Sarah A. Wayland, late of Winslow township, in said county, dec'd, No. 1, February Term, 1894, O. C. P. D. I will expose to public sale or outcry on the premises on Thursday, November 15, 1894.
 At two o'clock P. M., the following described real estate, the property of the estate of said Sarah A. Wayland, dec'd, to-wit:
 Bounded on the north by lands of John Smith and James M. Deemer, on the east by lands of O. Mitchell, on the south by lands of R. B. Douthet and M. Hartman, and on the west by lands of R. Douthet and Sealey & Alexander, containing one hundred and sixty-two acres and one hundred and forty-one perches; about eighty acres cleared, fenced and in a good state of cultivation; the balance timbered with hard wood; good orchards of apple, peach and other fruits; good springs of water; having thereon erected a good new barn fifty-two by forty feet, shingle roof; one frame dwelling house eighteen by forty-four feet with P attached eighteen by eighteen feet, twenty feet high, weather-boarded, lined and well finished; spring house and other necessary outbuildings.
 Situate on the public road leading from Reynoldsville to Punxsutawney about two miles from Reynoldsville, and located in the Reynoldsville coal field, and near to coal mines now operated.
 Also, at the same time and place, one other piece of land containing fifty acres, bounded on the north by lands of Joseph Strouse, on the east by lands of D. Cypret and Broombaugh, on the south by the five acre tract occupied by Jessie E. Deemer, west by lands of Mary A. Wayland, well timbered with hard wood; no improvements.
 Terms of Sale: Ten per cent. of the whole amount of purchase money at time of sale, and the balance, equal to one-third of the whole amount of sale, on confirmation thereof, and the other two-thirds in two equal annual payments with interest from date of confirmation of sale, to be secured by bond and mortgage on the premises, or paid in cash at the option of the purchaser.
 October 10, 1894.
