A Little of Everything.

It's no in titles per in rank.
It's no in wealth in Len'on bank.
To purchase peace and rest;
It's no in makin' muckle mair;
It's no in books; it's no in leare,
To make us truly blest;
If happiness hae not her seat
An' centre in the breast,
We may be wise, or rich, or great,
But never can be blest;
No treasures, nor pleasures,
Could make us happy lang;
The heart ay's the best part ay,
That makes us right or wrang.

There was never singing more intensely dramatic than this, for there was never singing more sincere. It was not an exhibition of art; it was the expression of real emotion.—New York Tribune. At Centennial hall May 21st. Tickets on sale at H. Alex Stoke's drug store.
The Good Templars, a temperance society which was organized a short time ago, will meet in the Centennial hall on Friday evening. An open session for charter members will be held the first part of the meeting, to which all young people interested in temperance are invited.

On Sunday night the thermometers in Reynoldsville registered four degrees below the freezing point. Early in the evening fine snow was flying in the air, and some who live out of town a short distance, say that in some places the ground was white with snow. This was quite a change from a week ago, when the temperature reached 95 degrees in the shade. The indications were good for plenty of fruit this season, but the hard frost has destroyed all hopes of a supply for this year.

The Junior Endeavorers of the Presbyterian church, led by Miss Belle Arnold, who is assisted by Miss Roberta Ayers, gave a very enjoyable entertainment at this church last Friday evening. The organization is composed of a large number of boys and girls under fifteen years of age. The entertainment was for the purpose of interesting parents and others in Junior work, and also for the display and presentation of a quilt prepared by the society. The quilt contained the names of more than five hundred people who contributed towards it. It was presented to Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Johnson.

A base ball club has been organized at Hopkins. Manager Fargus says that his team is able to cope with any amateur club in the county, as he has strengthened it with several new players. Following are the names of the players signed for '95: Blant and Bird, of Lock Haven Normal; Euler, McNearney and Bilby, of Jones st. Irish club, Lock Haven; Gritzer, of Williamsport, and Byrnes, Byrnes, Woodward, Warden, Dunkle and Fargus, who played in the club of '94. For further particulars call on or address, Manager W. H. Fargus, Hopkins, Pa.

They have enacted and put in force an ordinance in McKeesport that is a decidedly good one. It is one prohibiting the use of profane language upon the streets of that city. The policemen have strict orders to arrest every one and all persons they hear swearing on the streets. The first evening after the ordinance went into effect five men were arrested, and had to pay fines and costs. Such an ordinance is needed, and needed badly, too, right in our own borough of Reynoldsville. The language one hears in passing along some of our thoroughfares is horrible. By all means let us have such an ordinance.

"Our Country Cousin," the new play written for Frank Jones (popularly known as "Si Perkins") by Charles H. Flemming, Esq., affords a much wider scope for the characteristic line of work made famous by that clever comedian. The action of the play begins at the Homestead Farm, West Virginia, and introduces a plot replete with the keenest possible human interest, interspersed with intensely dramatic situations, and a touch of that peculiar rural comedy which never fails to awaken the delight of an audience. "Our Country Cousin" is a most emphatic success, and will undoubtedly occupy the boards for many seasons, and become equally as popular as "Si Perkins." At the Reynolds Opera house Thursday, May 16th.

Full Time Again.

The tannery at this place, which has been running on three-quarter time the past few months, started up in full yesterday morning. The number of hides worked has been 255 per day, but was increased to 330.

Memorial Services.

Memorial services will be held in the M. E. church Sunday, May 20th. All soldiers, Woman's Relief Corps and Sons of Veterans are requested to meet at the Grand Army hall at ten o'clock A. M. to march to church. Rev. P. J. Slattery will conduct the services.

Change in Business.

The firm of W. C. Schultze & Son, grocers, who have been doing business in Reynoldsville for a number of years, sold their store on Monday to W. H. Moore, of Corsica, and C. A. Dickinson, of Sheffield, Warren county. The new firm will be known as Moore & Dickinson, and will continue the business at the old stand. They are both pleasant gentlemen.

House Burned.

On last Thursday afternoon the dwelling house of Patrick Fox, near Reynolds grove, was destroyed by fire. When the blaze started a strong wind was blowing, and by the time the alarm was given and the fire companies on hand, the flames were issuing from all sides of the building, and the house was practically destroyed. The fire spread so rapidly that only a few pieces of furniture were saved.

Sixth Anniversary.

Sunday was observed as Epworth League Day in the M. E. church, it being the sixth anniversary of the organization of that society. The League at this place had charge of the services in the evening and prepared a program suitable for the occasion, consisting of singing, recitations, papers on the organization and history of the League, and work of the local chapter, &c. The services were both interesting and instructive.

Program for Fourth.

The members of the Reynoldsville Fire Co. attended their meeting last Thursday evening in full uniform and were inspected by Chief E. C. Burns. At the meeting the company decided on the amusements for the 4th of July celebration, which are as follows: Grand parade, bicycle race, fire exhibition, wheel barrow race, juvenile bicycle race, hose cart race, sack race, ball game and fire works. They will also make arrangements for holding a dinner and dance on the Glorious Fourth.

One Fellow Stabbed.

A free-for-all fight occurred on Main street, about six o'clock Saturday evening in front of the City Hotel, between a number of Italians and some of our native citizens. One of the Italians was arrested, taken before the burgess and fined three dollars and costs, which stopped the fracas for a time. After being allowed to depart he followed the rest of the crowd to the Hotel America, where the fight was again taken up. One fellow, who lives in Prescottville, was stabbed in three places, though not seriously injured. The man who was stabbed had three of the Italians arrested, the one who had been fined before the burgess for a hearing. There was no evidence sufficient to convict them of the charges and they were permitted to depart.

Plantation Melodies.

The Fisk Jubilee Singers still exercise their old-time fascination, and Concert Hall was crowded to suffocation last evening to hear them. The first part of the programme contained eight selections and the second part seven, which, added to the encores, provided the audience with about twenty-three different part songs and solos. These were none too long for the listeners, however, and if the club had been willing to sing all night the audience certainly would have remained to hear it. There was in reality a succession of good selections delightfully sung, and if the verdict of the audience were accepted the Jubilee Singers may have the satisfaction of knowing that they have given the most enjoyable concert of the winter.—Buffalo Courier, February 7th. At Centennial hall Tuesday evening, May 21st.

Heavy Storm.

The thunder storm which passed over Reynoldsville last Wednesday afternoon was the heaviest storm that has visited this section for a number of years. Lightning struck several places in and near town. The residence of Mrs. J. B. Ayers, in Reynoldsville, and the school house and new dwelling house of J. W. Dempsey, in West Reynoldsville, were struck. At the first two places mentioned little or no damage was done, but the damage to the latter property will amount to about $250. A large hole was torn in the roof, the weather-boarding on one side of the house torn off and the plaster knocked down on the inside. Although nearly all the family were in the house at the time, beyond a slight shock no one was injured. A number of trees and telephone poles were also struck during the shower. The heavy rain which fell did considerable damage to the gardens, completely washing them out in some places.

Graduates To-Morrow.

Rev. Parley Paul Womer, son of D. R. P. Womer, of this place, will graduate upon a three years' course at the Yale University, to-morrow, May 16th, with B. D. appended to his name. While yet in his teens Parley resolved to delve into the mines of knowledge and grasp from its depth an education. Possessed with a strong determination and a generous supply of uncultivated intellect he put the resolve into action by going to the Allegheny College at Meadville, where he remained one term. From there he went to the University at Delaware, Ohio, where almost four years were spent to good advantage. From Delaware Parley went to Dakota for a short time to proclaim the gospel to the people on the frontier. While "roughing it" in that state he secured a three years' scholarship to Yale University.

His career at Yale has been a successful one only, however, by three years of incessant labor. He was four years younger than any other member of his class and was, therefore, somewhat behind the other members of the class, but by extra exertion he gained the reputation of being a "hard hitter" and won the commendation of his professors. The line of work that he was most interested in was Philosophy, History, Hebrew, Chaldean, Greek, German and Theology. His graduation to-morrow will bring to a close seven years of hard study, not including the time spent in the schools of our town.
Besides the multitudinous studies and labors at Yale, Rev. Womer preached every Sunday, with few exceptions, for a Congregational church at Somersville, sixty miles away from New Haven. Since entering Yale he has withdrawn from the Methodist ministry and will break the bread of life to the people of the Congregational church at Somersville, where he received a unanimous call to become the regular pastor of the church.
Parley steps out of Yale a bright young man who is deserving of congratulations for the success he has achieved, and is a sample of what a young man can do if he possesses the necessary will power, backbone and pluck.

Dame Rumor asserts, and perhaps there is good foundation for the assertion, that the young minister has decided that "it is not good for man to live alone," and that before another twelvemonth is checked off on the calendar of time, he will take one of the handmaid and accomplished young blondes of Reynoldsville unto himself as a helpmate in the journey of life.

"Our Country Cousin."

"Our Country Cousin," a new play of rural life, by Charles H. Fleming, is the attraction at the Holiday Street theater this week. The performances yesterday indicate that the play is of more than usual interest. The scenery is realistic and there are some exciting scenes. There is a railroad scene in which real switches, telegraph poles, a derrick, etc., are used, while a train 200 feet in length makes its flight across the stage in six seconds. In the farm scene a threshing machine is introduced which adds to the realism of the play. Frank Jones, the original Si Perkins, is imitable as Jason Wheatley, the country cousin. He is ably supported by Miss Lillian Walton, as Dorothy Churchill, his sweetheart. J. G. Cally, as James the servant, does some clever acting. The entire cast is good and the play will have a successful run here.—Baltimore American. At the Reynolds Opera house Thursday evening, May 16th.

Thing of the Past.

Ten years hence a lumber yard will be one of the business necessities of Brockwayville. By that time there will be no mills to go to when a bill of lumber is desired. The town of Wiley in Elk county, is said to have already reached this condition. For many years the center of extensive lumber operations, the time has finally come when all lumber needed for domestic use has to be shipped in from a distance.—Brockwayville Record. There was a time when even the very site that Reynoldsville now occupies was covered with as fine timber as was ever floated to the market, but the lumber business was engaged in so extensively that the town now has several lumber yards the stock of which is shipped in here from other places.

Any Charges on That?

It has been three years since the Reynoldsville STAR was first introduced to the public. During that time it has been a very clean weekly paper, and if its tone can be taken as a correct criterion of the town, which is the natural presumption, Reynoldsville is a very nice place. THE STAR has not been standing still; it has made some advance, losing a little "freshness" which it had in the first year of its history, and which nearly all country newspapers have at the beginning. It is one of the institutions of the town which is entitled to universal respect.—DuBois Courier.

A Sad Accident.

On last Tuesday morning B. J. Wells, son of W. W. Wells, of West Reynoldsville, was drowned while at work driving logs on the Eau Claire River, in Wisconsin. The young man was 22 years of age the 8th of last October. He was born in Clarion county and came to Reynoldsville with his parents about three years ago, and had made his home with them until about last October. Since leaving home he has been in Wisconsin for sometime, and was engaged by the Northwestern Lumber Co. to drive log just a few days before the sad accident happened. His experience at log driving was limited, and besides this he was not able to swim. When the accident occurred he was on a log in the river and in some manner slipped and fell in, and was never seen alive again. Although every effort was made to save him, his body did not come to the surface until life was extinct. When found he was at the bottom of the river and his hands were clutched to the grass and weeds. A friend of his, who was working with him and saw the accident, had the body cared for and sent word of the accident to his parents at this place, who immediately sent a telegram to have the remains sent here. It was expected that the body would get here on Friday and services could be held that day, but for some reason his remains did not arrive until Saturday morning, reaching here on a special train from Falls Creek, on the R. & F. C. R'y., at about 11:00 o'clock. He was taken to the undertaker's rooms on arriving here, and at one o'clock the relatives and friends drove to the cemetery of the Old Mahoning Baptist church, near Smecksburg, Indiana county, where the mortal body was laid in its last resting place.

The deceased was an industrious and honest young man, of strictly temperate habits. He was a member of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Baptist church at this place, and the beautiful floral offering made by that society would show with what respect he was held by them. Below we publish an account of his death as published in the Eau Claire (Wis.) Morning Telegram:
"Judd Wells, a young man of twenty-two years, working on the drive for the Northwestern Lumber company, fell off a log in the south fork of the Eau Claire river yesterday morning and was drowned. The young fellow who came to this section of the country last fall for the first time from Pennsylvania, was very popular among the men. He was quiet and unassuming and a total abstainer. He knew nothing of riding logs, and when he fell off, the log got away from him. Nor could the young man swim. A companion of the deceased, Richard Mellville, jumped into the rushing waters and made a desperate attempt to save Wells, but it seems that the unfortunate fellow got tangled up in the grass at the bottom of the river. His body was recovered and sent here for burial. A telegram received here from his father, however, directed that the body be sent there last night by the undertakers."

The Right Kind of Citizens.

A town or city is just what its citizens make it. Given the right sort of people and a desert waste will be transformed into a garden that shall bloom like the rose and a straggling settlement into a city. Given the wrong sort of citizens, and all the advantages of soil, climate, geographical position and wealth will go for naught. Manufacturers do not make the city. The city makes the manufacturers. The stockyards and grain elevators did not make Chicago; pork-packing did not make Cincinnati; a railroad center did not make Indianapolis. In each case the city is the cause and the business the effect. These cities had public-spirited men, and they attracted the kind of business which was located in them—that is all.
And what is the right kind of citizen? He is the man who does not look across the continent for an investment, but spends his money at home and encourages home enterprises. The right kind of a citizen does not grumble about high taxes, because he has sense enough to know that taxes must be high in a growing city, and that if low taxes are a desideratum he must go to a place that has stopped growing or that has never grown much. The right kind of a citizen knows the distinction between the virtue of economy, which avoids all waste, but spends money freely for public improvement, and the vice of parsimony, that spends nothing unless absolutely compelled to. The right kind of a citizen may be a wealthy man—indeed he is more frequently not one—but he cheerfully helps support the public schools and the churches.
The right kind of a citizen believes in well-lighted streets and good sidewalks, for he knows that vice and crime hate gas-light and electric light almost as much as they do day-light and that they love darkness. He also knows that these things give a good impression to strangers. The right kind of a citizen also is fully aware of the fact that no expenditure brings so great a return to the citizen as that which he pays in taxes, provided it be honestly and judiciously applied.
