WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1895.

An independent local paper, published every Wednesday at Reynoldsville, Jefferson Co., Pa., devoted to the interests of Reynoldsville and Jefferson county. Non-political, will treat all with fairness, and will be especially friendly towards the laboring class.

In the language of Mark Twain we would remark that there are a number of young men in Reynoldsville who have a "rich abundance of idle time."

It is estimated that $5,000,000 will be expended by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in the way of improvements, alterations and extensions to its property east and west of Pittsburgh this year.

Caroline said: Show me the man you honor. I know by that symptom better than any other what kind of a man you are yourself; for you show me what your ideal of manhood is, what kind of a man you long to be.

Some one has said: "One of the surest evidences of a person's conversion is the way in which he helps along the cause of Christ financially. Until he learns to give because he loves to do so, there is a lack somewhere in his consecration." If this be the standard to judge from, there are some people in Reynoldsville who "lack somewhere in their consecration." So many people love to think and sing, "Salvation is free."

There is a French saying that courtesies and favors are like flowers, which are only sweet while they are fresh, but afterwards they quickly fade and wither. "Not so," replies a noted man; "the favors you did us nearly twenty years ago are as fresh to me as if they were done yesterday. I distill them in the alembic of my memory, and they turn to essences." A beautiful reply, indeed; and how much of truth there is in it! Surely all of us cherish certain kindnesses and courtesies and favors we have received from friends and even strangers, years ago, and they form quite a part of the pleasures of memory. How often have we heard the expression, "I shall never forget her kindness;" or, "I never hear that gentleman's name spoken but I recall with pleasure his courtesy to me." The fragrance of these flowers of courtesy always remains.

In many of the churches over the country to-day, and Reynoldsville is no exception, the front seats are almost, if not all together, empty during services. It would look better to have them all filled up first, and then if any empty ones remain, they should be those at the rear of the church. When people attend an entertainment in the opera house or Centennial hall, the front part of the buildings are filled up first. The young people of the Christian Endeavor Societies and Epworth League could do much to improve this in their respective churches, if they would band themselves together to fill up all the front seats at the next regular service of the church, and continue it. It is almost a rule for the young people to take a seat about the center of the audience-room, and from that point back to the rear they fill in, making the majority of the audience occupy the space in the room, from the center rearward. Indeed, some of the older church members follow the same example—or perhaps they have set this example for the young.

Nothing more quickly marks a young man as a gentleman than deference to the whims and habits of those past middle life. It is easier to look backward than forward; and it may be well to bear in mind that as people have always been influenced in old age by their early training, so will it be in the future; and that the next generation will probably find the young men of today "behind the times" in very many cases. Those who boast superiority as to manners, mental endowment and physical strength, can very well afford to be magnanimous in their judgment of others less fortunate. Young men, above all others, should not kick a man who is down. On the contrary, it is the part of manhood to help the fallen, to provide out of our plenty, that the meager resources of others may be less noticeable. But if the old people cannot go so fast, can not be lifted out of the "ruts," can not learn the "new-fangled notions," then more's the pity. The difference may be made less notable, however, by generous conduct on the part of those who can, if they will, conform to the eccentricities of others. If grandmother uses "is" for "are", it is to be borne in mind that it is much more difficult for her to change the habit of a half century than for a young man to abandon his daily quota of cigarettes. If grandfather uses his knife for his fork at the table, young men should remember that this is a fault which is not comparable with the impatience which will not permit them to overlook it.

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Rebecca Lawson Reed was born in Kittanning, Armstrong Co., Pa., on the nineteenth of September, 1809, and died in Hillersburg August twenty-second, 1895.

Mrs. Reed was a daughter of David and Isabella Dieky Lawson and was one of a family of four brothers and seven sisters, of whom five are still living. She was married to Peter Reed on October 22nd, 1839. Her father, David Lawson, was one of the most influential men of his generation. Of Scotch Irish ancestry he possessed the characteristics of that people, and this daughter inherited to a marked degree the same sterling qualities. Her christian life was unusually fearless and conscientious, and impressed itself deeply upon all with whom she came in contact. She literally walked and talked with God and her life and prayers were a constant inspiration to others. She loved the church and was never willingly absent from its privileges. Her husband, two sons and two daughters preceded her to the better land, while two sons and one daughter remain to cherish her memory. The close of her life was quiet and peaceful and on the twenty-fourth of August her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Hillersburg to await the resurrection morn.

"Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy loved employ.
The battle fought, the victory won.
Enter thy Master's joy."

Mining Situation at DuBois.

The mining situation here has for many months been such that the miners, those in the employ of the Bell, Lewis & Yates Co., could not earn a living, and now they cannot earn anything at that occupation unless they go elsewhere for employment. The company has three mines here, Rochester, the largest, and London and Sandy Lick, two smaller mines. London mine is the only one in which work has not been ordered entirely suspended for an indefinite period. Upwards of 200 men are employed there, and they have been doing very little all summer, the same as all the other mines. At the two other mines about 700 men are employed when they are running full. Since work has been so slack the number has been constantly decreasing. A miner told the Courier last evening that he thought not more than 300 were working in Rochester when they had work, several hundred having sought employment elsewhere. Some of those who left found employment at Walston, Adrian and Helvetia, and still others have taken up some other occupation. Others will now begin to look for work elsewhere. Some have been continuing on with the hope that there would be an improvement till their resources have become reduced so much they must leave their families, if they go away, until they have had time to earn something. While the company retains its large holdings here any suspension is only temporary; but the men cannot stand the pinch while it lasts.—DuBois Courier.

Some folks will be growlin'
When storm-winds are howlin'
They jest like to grumble an' sigh;
But I somehow content me
With all that is sent me,
For the good Lord's a-runnin' the sky?
—Atlanta Constitution.

Come in and see me and pay me a little on your account. I need it badly. I helped you, now come and help me. J. A. WELSH.
