The Apple as a Timber Tree. In some sections of this country the apple tree is looked on for its product as a piece of timber, as well as a fruitproducing article. For this reason the old German fruit growers in the vieinity of Philadelphia, always almed to get a nice straight trunk to an apple tree and train it up comparatively high before allowing it to form a head. Moderns have supposed that the chief object to be gained by this method of training was in order to facilitate plowing operations, but the ultimate end in having a good trunk for timber purposes was not forgotten. In this particular region, the wood was used chiefly for shoemakers' lasts-a bust ness which, in the earlier history of Philadelphia, did much to help the trade of that famous manufacturing center of population. The apple re glons have mostly disappeared from that vicinity; but other sections of the country seem to understand the value of apple tree wood. It is stated in the Country Gentleman that a fruit grower of Cayuga sold to a well-known firm of sawmakers of Philadelphia-Disston & Sons-the trunks of some of their trees, which were cut away because the trees had grown too closely gether, to the value of $500. In this
