

A TYPE OF NOBLE MANHOOD.

Bishop Whipple Pays a High Tribute to the Indian.

It is not often that a good word is spoken in behalf of the Indian, but when one is it generally comes from among those who know him best. Bishop Whipple, of Montana, has spent many of the best years of his life with the red men, and has studied their lives and habits. The following will therefore be read with interest, coming as it does from one who knows whereof he speaks.

"The Indian is the noblest type of the wild man in the world," says Bishop Whipple. "He recognizes the Great Spirit, believes in a future life, has a passionate love for his children, and will lay down his life for his tribe. He is courteous and hospitable. If his bitterest enemy came to his wigwam he would be treated as an honored guest. The Indian is proverbially honest, unless he is demoralized by drink. In thirty-six years' experience with the Indians I never knew one to tell me a lie, and I never had a thing stolen by one. I asked an Indian once if it was safe to leave my property in my wigwam while I made a distant journey. He laughed and said: 'Quite safe. There isn't a white man within 100 miles of you.' Among themselves the Indians are fond of jokes and often shout with laughter. They are tactful, however, in the presence of the whites."

"In 1862, during the civil war, the Indians learned from pictures which they saw on the traders' counters that the North was at war with the South and was being defeated. When the agent enlisted a company of half-breeds they believed they could recover their lost territory. They commenced a massacre in which 800 people were killed in three weeks. The western border of Minnesota was a trail of blood. Many of the noblest border men I have ever known were cruelly murdered. It was darker than midnight. I shall carry to my grave the warm hospitality of those friends who now sleep in nameless graves. The massacre was the outcome of a long series of neglects and dishonesty, and the only light in the darkness of those days was the fact that the Christian Indians were true as steel. They saved more than 500 white women and children. There are Indians still living whom I love as the bravest knights that ever walked on earth, and who, at the risk of the hatred of their fellows and danger to their lives, never faltered. The same massacre would have taken place on our northern border had it not been for the fact that the Christian Indians are timely warning of danger, and friendly Indians came to the defence of the whites."

Texas Educating the Negroes.

In Texas there are some eight academies and colleges for the higher education of Afro-Americans. Nearly all of these schools are presided over and taught by young Afro-Americans. The exceptions are the Tillotson school at Austin, one of the many supported by the American Missionary Association, which is manned entirely by whites, and Bishop College at Marshall, which has a white president and mixed teachers. These schools are scattered all over the State, and it is not easy to estimate the tremendous work they are doing for the future of the race and of the State. Indeed, they are revolutionizing the character of the people in Texas. It is a remarkable fact that in respect, as in most of the States of South, there are more of the schools for the higher education of colored people in Texas than there are for the whites."

A Sow Elected Them.

In olden times the mayors of Leicester, in England, were elected by a sow. The candidates sat in a semi-circle, and with his hat full of beans in his hand, and he was elected mayor from those that the sow ate first.

KILLED BY AN EXPLOSION.

Six Dead and Many More Wounded in a Tenement House.

An explosion, caused by escaping gas, wrecked a house, reducing it to atoms, on Church court, Strand, London. Six persons have been killed and many were injured by the collapse of the house. The building consisted of three floors, and its tenants were mostly Covent Garden market porters. A deafening report was suddenly heard and then the house collapsed as if made of cards, causing much excitement in the neighborhood.

As a result of the explosion the new Church court was blocked with a great mass of burning debris, which was made up of the wreck of the house in which the explosion occurred. In this wreck thirteen occupants of the house, including six children, are supposed to be buried.

Two firemen, while searching in the burning embers in an effort to extricate the victims, were buried beneath the upper story of an adjoining house, which suddenly collapsed. One of the unfortunate firemen was resuscitated in an injured condition, but the other still remains buried in the ruins.

Moseley had his jaw broken in two places and his hair burned off. Wanemacher was burned to a crisp. The building, which is three stories, was destroyed. At one time adjoining buildings were on fire, but the firemen extinguished the flames. The loss is estimated at $25,000; partially insured.

CURIOUS PHENOMENA.

Small Streams in Indiana Suddenly Filled With Water.

An interesting point for specialists to consider in connection with the earthquake is the fact that a number of the smaller Indiana streams, having their source in the southern border of the gas belt, have suddenly filled with water.

No rains have occurred in this state for months to swell the streams, and in the case of Honey creek, in the eastern part of Bartholomew county, it had gone dry several weeks ago, the water standing only in pools here and there. This week it is filled to the brim, and in some places has overflowed and washed away fences on the adjoining farms.

Sugar creek, that runs near Edinburgh, Johnson county, was nearly dry, but today it is reported to be nearly filled. Smaller streams rising in the Hancock county gas territory have shown similar phenomena.

No one can explain whence the water comes and it is offered that the sinking of the earth in the gas belt has afforded new outlets for underground water courses, thus feeding the streams. Honey creek, the Hancock county records show that previous to the Charleston earthquake, August 1, 1886, the stream acted as it has now. The phenomena was reported previous to the quake on September 26, 1876, both of the quakes having been strongly felt in Indiana.

The most remarkable demonstration was at Charleston, Mo. After the first shock the earth's surface continued to vibrate fully twenty minutes. Hundreds of chimneys were toppled down and plate glass in several stores broken to bits. The brick Metho dist church was badly shattered, and the plastering knocked from a hundred or more interiors. In the country four miles south of Charleston the crust of the earth was broken in fifty places and from the fissures water and sand were gushing in considerable volumes. The same thing is reported in districts further south and also at Big Lake, several miles north of the town. This is a part of the old volcano region, which was overthrown and all nearly destroyed by an earthquake eighty years ago.

At Gadsden, Ala., the shock wrecked several houses, injuring several people.

The capitol building at Jackson, Miss., was so badly cracked by the earthquake it is feared it may collapse.

From the safe $1,000, half of which was gold, was taken. After looting the safe the burglars broke open the section house on the Big Four railroad and stole a handcar, with which they escaped.

Private Roof Gardens.

Plans have been drawn for two new houses that are to be built uptown on the west side of New York for private residences, and each of them is to have a roof garden. This would indicate that their owners intend to spend part of the summer months in New York.

"I know of no better place in New York for a private roof garden," said the architect of one of these houses, "than the high ground on the west side of town. The house that I am going to build will be four stories high, and as there are no high apartment buildings near by the roof garden on the top will be private in every sense of the word. It is the owner's purpose to have it so arranged that he may have his breakfast or his dinner served there in warm weather. Under these circumstances he may forget that he is in the city. From his roof he can look over Riverside Park, and across the river to the Jersey shore. This is the coolest part of the town in the summer, you know, and I expect to see many of the new residences up there equipped with roof gardens."

Revenge is Sweet.

It takes a bright woman to rebuke another woman's rudeness, a general statement well borne out by a story from the Atlanta Constitution.

A lady entered a railway train and took a seat in front of a newly married couple. She was hardly seated before they began making remarks about her.

Her last year's bonnet and cloak were fully criticised, with more or less giggling on the bride's part, and there is no telling what might have come next if the lady had not put a sudden stop to the conversation by a bit of strategy.

She turned her head, noticed that the bride was considerably older than the groom, and in the smoothest tones said: "Madam, will you please have your son close the window behind you?"

The "son" closed his mouth, and the bride no longer giggled.
