The May Shaw Burlesque and Specialty Co. engaged the opera house for last Friday night, sent bills and dated the town for Thursday night and then the company failed to materialize. P. T. Dailey, who has lived in Reynoldsville about twenty-two years, died at his home near the A. V. R'y depot at 11.00 P. M., Friday, Nov. 22nd. Consumption was the cause of his death. The entertainment to be given in the opera house this evening by the Junior Christian Endeavor of the Presbyterian church promises to be a pleasant affair. The Keystone band will furnish excellent music for the occasion.

Put in New Pipe. New water pipe was put in from the main line into the Arnold block last week. The pipe was so badly rusted it was almost closed up and the force of the water was shut off in the building so that it became a difficult matter to get water.

Lost a Finger. A. R. Schueckers, of West Reynoldsville, who was working on the lath mill at O'Donnell, had the index finger of his right hand cut off at the second joint and his right thumb split by accidentally allowing his hand to come in contact with the lath saw last Wednesday afternoon.

New Insurance Policy. Chas. B. French, the insurance agent, has a new policy he can write. It is an accidental policy for bicycle riders to whom the company will pay a stipulated sum if they are injured, or will pay the bill in case the rider holding a policy accidentally injures any one by running onto them with his wheel and is sued for damage.

Union Thanksgiving Service. According to the established custom, the Presbyterians, Methodists and Baptists will hold union Thanksgiving services at 11 o'clock to-morrow, Thursday. It has also been the custom to alternate ministers and churches, and this year the service will be held in the Baptist church and Rev. J. W. Crawford, pastor of the M. E. church, will preach the sermon.

Frisky Team. L. J. McEntire & Co., grocers, have a pretty team of black horses that are very spirited. Thursday noon "Jap" got the horses out of the barn and they were feeling frisky and broke loose from him and indulged in a lively run on several of the main streets. One of the animals slipped and fell off the sidewalk onto a tin can and cut an ugly gash on its right thigh. It took fifteen stitches to sew up the wound.

It Can Be Heard. When the new fire alarm bell was placed in the bell tower a number of people were of the opinion that the alarm could not be heard distinctly all over town, but when it can be heard two miles away from Reynoldsville the people of the town ought to be able to hear it. When the alarm was sounded on Tuesday afternoon of last week a Reynoldsville gentleman was at Sandy Valley and he says he could hear each stroke of the bell distinctly.

Will Build in the Spring. A. D. Deemer, who purchased the Arnold block a little over one year ago, proposes to build a two-story brick addition to the rear end of the block in the spring. He is making arrangements now for the new addition. Mr. Deemer is trying to lease the rear end of J. Van Reed's lot at the corner of Fifth street and Gordon alley for the purpose of moving the two-story frame building, at the rear of the Arnold block, onto the Reed lot to be used as a warehouse.

Valuable Dog Poisoned. When L. M. Simmons, superintendent of the Oil City Fuel Supply Co. at this place, got up last Wednesday morning he found his valuable St. Bernard dog, Edgewood, lying in the yard cold and stiff in death. Some one had poisoned the dog. Mr. Simmons does not know whether the poison had been thrown into the yard to the dog or whether he had gotten it some where else and went home to die. He does not want to think there is any one in this town who would be contemptible and devilish enough to fix up the poison especially for Edgewood. A man was hired to take the dog to the woods and bury it. Edgewood was born Nov. 27, 1890. He was a Rough Coat St. Bernard dog. He was sired by Mascot Bernard. Edgewood was an intelligent dog, easily taught, and had an affectionate disposition. Mr. and Mrs. Simmons prized their dog very highly.

Monument in the Creek. In a long freight train on the Low Grade Div. of the A. V. R'y last Wednesday was a car on which was loaded a large monument. When the train struck a curve near Broken Rock the car jumped off the track, to the upper side, and the monument slipped down the high embankment into the creek. None of the other cars of the train were wrecked. The shaft of the monument was 28 feet in length. It took four days to get the monument onto the cars again. The wrecking crew on the Low Grade worked several days and finally had to send for the Main Line wrecking crew before the monument could be replaced on the car. One of the Low Grade men who was assisting in the work of trying to get the monument out of the creek suggested the second day of the work that the man, for whom the monument was intended, be brought there and buried.

Large Funeral. The Methodist Episcopal church was taxed almost to its utmost capacity to accommodate the large crowd of people who attended Port Harries' funeral last Thursday afternoon. The services, which were very impressive, were conducted by Rev. J. W. Crawford, assisted by Rev. P. J. Slattery. Port Harries was a noble young man who had a host of friends. He led an exemplary life.

During the last two weeks of Port's illness he was irrational most of the time. On Monday morning before he died Port was perfectly rational for fifteen minutes, and during that brief time his sister, Lizzie, and Mrs. Clawson had the following conversation with him, which we publish by request: "If God calls you Port, are you ready to go?" "Yes, I know I have a home in heaven." "Are you happy?" "Yes, My heart is full." "Is there any person you want to see?" "Bring my sisters and brother. Kiss me good by." "When you get to heaven who do you expect to see?" He smiled and said: "I will see Jesus, Mollie, Minnie and mother. I will kiss Mollie first." Most all his rational hours during his illness he spent in singing and praying. He was very desirous of being prepared to enter heaven. He said once while rational: "If I miss heaven, I miss all."

A Correction. In setting up Rev. Jas. H. Jelbart's article last week there were three or four rather serious omissions which, in justice to Rev. Jelbart, we correct this week. In the 1st column, second paragraph, eighth line the words "it is a pity," were omitted. It should have read: "Should this be denied, we have only to say it is a pity that this modern philosopher did not flourish in the beginning of our national life," etc. In the third paragraph, same column, eleventh line it should read: "Let us try this syllogism, using his theory for our major premise: Temptations are in the world for the promotion of character and virtue; the devil is the author of temptations; therefore, the devil is the promoter of character and virtue." In the thirty-first line of the same paragraph it should read: "We should expect to find the best type of manhood," etc. In the second column, last paragraph but one, in the first line, the word, "editor," was omitted.

We are sorry these mistakes occurred, but the article was set up on Saturday and our type did not work perfectly so near the end of the week, and the proof reader was indisposed that day.

Pysher's Mishap. P. J. Pysher, the blacksmith who came to town quite often while working at his trade at McMillen's mill, and always slipped at the intoxicating cup until he would get hilarious and become conspicuous on account of his boisterousness and fast driving, met with an accident at DuBois one evening last week which came very nearly putting an end to his earthly existence. The Express, in giving an account of Pysher's mishap, says: "He was feeling pretty jolly and must have attempted to drive over a ditch, but did not succeed, as in attempting to get up the other side the carriage and horse fell back and threw him out, both falling upon him. Several people were attracted by the noise and after a good deal of trouble succeeded in extricating him from his perilous position. His face was a sight to behold, the scalp being cut and his upper lip split open from the left corner of the mouth to the left nostril."

Assaulted on Main St. At a late hour Saturday night three or four young men of this place assaulted two Polanders at the Arnold block corner. The night police appeared in that neighborhood and one of the party, who had apparently been watching, gave the signal and they all vamoosed down Fifth street. The names of the young men are known and the Polanders were going to have warrants issued for them on Monday morning, but did not.

A Polander started home Saturday night with a keg of beer on his shoulder and in a dark place on one of the streets he was knocked out from under the beer keg and was allowed to go home without the beer and also minus his hat.

Special Program. A special program has been prepared by the West Reynoldsville public school for Thanksgiving, which will be given in the school building to-morrow forenoon at nine o'clock. The exercises will be over in time to give the teachers, pupils and visitors an opportunity to attend the union service in the Baptist church at 11.00 A. M.

Two Ghosts. Ever and anon ghost stories appear in the newspapers that are the offspring of some imaginary brain or the sophisticated production of some careless hand of the truth, but we have a true ghost story that can be vouched for by three charming ladies of Beechwoods. At least the three ladies, whose names we do not care to give to our readers, were fully convinced on the night—not a fortnight ago—when they saw two ghosts jump over the walls of the Beechwoods cemetery and run down the road and then run back and disappear in the "silent city of the dead," that they were real spirits of departed friends or neighbors. The shrieks and cries of the maidens, when they saw the white ghosts coming towards them as if on angel wings, was almost enough to wake the dead. Wm. Cooper and family awakened from their peaceful slumbers and to them the almost breathless maidens related their thrilling and hair-raising story of seeing two genuine ghosts come from and return to the cemetery. These young ladies would never have believed other than that they had seen two ghosts, had it not been that the story was too good for the boys to keep who had stirred up the spirits. The ladies had been to a literary entertainment, some of the boys knew they would pass by the cemetery, and also that there were two white calves in that neighborhood. When the ladies arrived at a good point the calves were chased up and of course the ladies thought they had jumped over the cemetery wall. The boys took across the fields, headed the calves off and started them back towards the cemetery. It was a dark night and the ladies could not see the boys and mistook the innocent calves for ghosts that had stalked abroad in the night time.
