"Cool as a cucumber," is scientifically correct. Investigation shows that this vegetable has a temperature one degree below that of the surrounding atmosphere.

Scientists are always doing something to destroy indulgences in osculation. The latest is that there are microbes in kisses. If there were mice in them, or even rattlesnakes, this kissing would go on long after the scientists of to-day have departed this life.

A subscriber, wishing to show his appreciation of a newspaper, said: "The two classes of men which the world could least afford to lose are preachers and newspaper men for the preachers tell us the truth and the newspapers tell us everything else."

One of the most unpleasant tasks to the newspaper man is writing obituaries. If the subject was a life-long cash-paying subscriber it is easier to give him a good certificate of character than if he was not; even then it is difficult to please the friends of the deceased and acquit your own conscience.—Country Publisher and Printer.

An exchange says: The modern dead horse is nearly as valuable as when he is alive. In the first place the hide is valuable; the hide over the rump furnishes cordovan while the rest is used for slippers and driving gloves, the hair from the mane and tail is made up into hair-cloth and the short hair is used for cushions and collars. From the hoof oil is extracted, and the horny part is made into combs, the leg bones are made into knife handles, the ribs and head are burned to make bone black after the glue has been extracted and by chemical processes, phosphorus, carbonate of ammonia, cyanide of potassium and prussic acid obtained, then the meat is canned and shipped somewhere, the whole revenue of one horse being $24.

The man who goes down in Dixie now-a-days is liable to run up against some one from the north at every turn he makes. The traveller from New England or the West need not think he will be lonesome in that part of the country. He will find New England Yankees, Ohio Buckeyes, Indiana Hoosiers and Pennsylvania Dutch, as they are proud to call themselves, scattered here and there making the most of their chances, living well, getting rich, and growing up with the country down in the southland. They had a gathering of the hustling northern settlers at Southern Pines, N. C., one of the best resorts in the world, bye-the-bye, for invalids, the other day. Something like twelve hundred people from all over the United States got acquainted with each other and compared notes of their success in the south. A great many of these people are living along the Seaboard Air Line, and know by the book just how it pays to stay in the south. Maybe you would like to see how some of them live. Perhaps you have a bad cough, or the doctor tells you that you are going into a decline. If you should decide to go to Southern Pines and see for yourself how it will help you, just take the Bay Line route, and you will get there.

Good roads is a question that is always a burning one, and one that will stand agitating in season and out of season. In fact, the question is ever before the public. When the roads are good they are a pleasure to every one; when they are bad, why, then, the question burns all the more deeply. The following from the Harrisburg Telegraph is worthy of thoughtful consideration:

"The wheelmen of the state should get together and draft a road law for presentation to the next legislature. If they can draft a satisfactory law, they can do more than any legislature that has sat in the past fifteen years. But until some organized body like the wheelmen give the legislature to understand in unmistakable terms that it must pass a road law, there will never be a road law passed. This is a good subject on which to catechise aspirants for the legislature. And when they are catechised, get their answer in writing. They ought to be pinned down, and there is nothing wrong in making them promise that they will do a good thing."

Jefferson county will be represented in the legislature by two able men who are undoubtedly willing to act along these lines. Let the wheelmen draft a suitable road law and our representatives will conform to the wishes of the people.—Brookwayville Record.

Resolved, That while we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we yet feel the loss of a good and worthy brother and extend to his bereaved family our heart-felt sympathy for the loss they have sustained, and that we will ever hold in grateful remembrance his pleasant companionship in our Lodge; and be it further

A father wrote to an editor for information as to how to stop his boy from smoking cigarettes, and got this reply: "We suggest bribery, persuasion, instruction or shutting off allowance. Then, if he remains obdurate use raw hide. Welt him until he is ready to hold up his hand and promise not to smoke another. If that does not stop him, drown him, as a drowned boy is better than one who smokes cigarettes."
