Two of a Kind.

A literary anecdote is told in the Bookman of a young lady in Providence, R. L. who was asked the other day by her uncle to make some purchases for him, of which he gave her a written list. The first item was "Scott's Emulsion," and, after glancing at it, the intelligent young woman made straight for a certain large book-shop, where she was received by an equally intelligent salesman. "I want a copy of Scott's 'Emulsion,' " said she, casual-"Scott's what?" said the clerk, Scott's 'Emulsion,' " replied the maiden. "Oh, yes," was the answer; "well, von see, we don't sell Scott's works except in complete sets."

BABOON WARFARE.

Astonishing Military Organization of African Apes.

The Simians Are Well Organized for Plunder or Defence.

Evidence of the astonishing sagacity any military organization of the African baboons increases with the recent exploration of their favorite haunts, due to the troubles in Central Africa and Abyssinia. The English, German and Italian travelers and emissaries who have been employed in various missions on the fringes of the Abyssinian plateau have corroborated many stories which have hitherto been suspected to be exaggerations of fact. It now appears that their methods and discipline are far in advance of those of any other vertebrate animals, and not inferior to those of some of the native tribes themselves.

The different species of baboons, which are found commonly over the whole African continent, are all by nature dwellers in the open country. They find their food on the ground, and, whether this be insects or vegetables, it is usually in places which afford little shelter or protection. Though strong and well armed with teeth, they are slow animals, with little of the usual monkey agility when on the ground, and not particularly active even when climbing among rocks. In the rocky "kopjes" of the South or the cliffs and river sides of Abyssinis, and the Nile tributaries, they are safe enough. But they often abandon these to invade the low country. When on expeditions of this kind they often leave their stronghold for days together, and the means of joint defence from enemies in the open country are then carefully organized, Their natural enemies when thus exposed are the leopard, the lion, and, in South Africa, the Cape wild dogs. To the attack of the leopard they oppose numbers and discipline. No encounter between the baboons and wild dogs has been witnessed and described, but their defensive operations against domesticated dogs were seen and recorded by the German naturalist, Brehm. The following account appears in the translation of his travels by Mrs. Thompson, just published:

The baboons were on flat ground, crossing a valley, when the traveler's dogs, Arab greyhounds, accustomed to fight sucressfully with hyenas and other beasts of prey, rushed toward the baboons. Only the females took to flight; the males, on the contrary, turned to face the dogs, growled, beat the ground with their hands, opened their mouths wide and showed their glittering teeth, and looked at their adversaries so furiously and maliciously that the hounds usually bold and battle-hardened shrank back." By the time the dogs were encouraged to renew the attack, the whole herd had made their way, covered by the rearguard, to the rocks, except a sixmonths old monkey, which was left behind. The little monkey sat on a low rock, surrounded by the dogs, but was rescued by an old baboon, who stepped down from the cliff near, advanced toward the dogs, kept them in check by gestures and menacing sounds, picked up the baby monkey and carried it to the cliff, where the dense crowd of monkeys, shouting their battle-cry, were watching his heroism. The march of the baboons is not a mere expedition of the predatory members of the community. The whole nation "treck" together, and make war on the cultivated ground in common. Their communities are numerous enough to reproduce in miniature the movements of troops. The tribe often numbers from 250 to 300 individuals. Of these the females and young are placed in the centre when on the march, while the old males march in front and close the rear. Other males scout upon the flanks. It has been noticed that these remain on guard, and do not feed during the whole time that the rest are gathering provender. If disturbed by men, the old males form a rear guard and retire without any haste, allowing the females and young to go on shead carrying the plander. Their retreat is, as a rule, deliberate and orderly, the baboons being quite ready to do battle with any animal except man on the plains, and instantly becoming the assailant of man himself when they get the advantage of position. Brehm was stoned out of a pass in a few minutes by the dog-faced baboons. "These self-reliant animals," he writes, "are a match even for men. While the screaming females with young ones fled with all haste over the crest of the rock beyond the range of our guns, by privacy.

the adult males, casting furious glances, beating the ground with their hands, sprang upon stones and ledges, looked down on the valley for a few moments, continually growling, snarling and screaming, and then began to roll down stones on us with so much vigor and adroitness, that we immediately saw that our lives were in danger and took to flight. The clever animals not only conducted their defense on a definite plan, but they acted in cooperation, striving for a common end, and exerting all their united strength to obtain it. One of our number saw one monkey drag his stone up a tree, that he might hurl it down with more effect; I myself saw two combining to set a heavy stone rolling."

About Bicycling.

Adjusting the saddle properly has much to do with safe and comfortable riding. The rule should be to keep the saddle as near parallel to the bar as possible. Avoid tilting, especially backward. Breathe through the nose; if forced to breathe through the mouth, keep the tongue well pressed against the upper front teeth-to avoid inhalation of cold air, the force of which should be broken by passing through the nose and warmed for in-

A sponge bath with tipid water and friction is beneficial immediately after a ride in the open air. Sponging with diluted alcohol relieves the muscular sorness and stiffness.

Ice cold drinks, pastry and sweets are not conducive to health at any time. A cyclist, after a long spin, needs food to supply the tissue waste. The hunger which a ride in the park provokes is such that one can and should eat only health-producing food. "Hungry enough to est anything!" That anything should be fruit, sandwiches and milk. Tea made from beaf extract is stimulating and refreshing.

Violent riding will produce heart disease. Women suffering from shortness of breath will find the exercise dangerous.

Only a sponge and friction bath should be taken immediately after riding. The body is too fatigued; a full plunge is then too exhausting.

With proper adjustment of the saddle and attention to dress at seasonable times moderate cycling will result in benefit to the majority of women. - Philadelphia Times.

A Two-headed Turtle.

L. E. Hudson tells Gameland about a freak turtle he found on the shores of Lake Ontario among a lot of newly hatched turtles.

This turtle was just emerging from its shell. There were two heads and two necks to it, and each head was apparently independent of the other, and each seemed to have contrary ideas as to the proper way to go. Both heads would be asleep when one would wake up and start the body off according to its own ideas. That would rouse the other head and then there would be a mix-up of motions. It died after a while,
