contrary she would have earned an American renown without being troubled to so much as open her lips. True, renown was all she would earn; but she had voluntarily given up the offer of other emoluments before the far Marana had ever been thought of.

The world, Mr. Randolph thought, must be a barbarously large as well as a reprehensibly inattentive place, since it had failed to follow with solicitude the course of his domestic concerns.

serenity during the last half hour had been gradually verging toward the soporific stage. A few moments afterward there was a knock at the study door, and Wallie, resting his chin on the apex of a triangle made by his elbows and joined hands, said, "Come in!"

The visitor entered, and coming up to Wallie's chair took the paw of the lemur in his hand and shook it. The lemur chattered and Wallie looked up.

"Hullo, Geoffrey," he said, "I was just thinking about a cottage at Newport. Sit down and let me tell you my idea. Have a cigarette—or a cigar?"

"Have you any smoking tobacco?" returned Geoffrey, taking a pipe from his pocket. "I guess you'll find some Cavendish in the jar. You know where the matches are."

Geoffrey supplied himself, and then drew a chair to the other side of the fireplace and smoked for several minutes in silence. At length he said, "Were you at the opera last night?"

"No. What was it?" "Sominville." "Good?" "Yes." "Your theatre seems to mix her."

Wallie remarked, "By the way, there must be a column about last night in the paper. Yes; here it is. 'No such rendering of the music of this part has ever—' and so on. She's a big success."

"She deserves it, doesn't she?" "She can sing, sir—she can—sing," replied Wallie, with the quiet slowness that was his only form of emphasis.

"What's the puzzle?" "What's been through the wars, where are her scars? She looks fresh as a lily and sweet as new mown hay. Where's the cloven foot?"

He stopped, and Bellingham said, "Any man has a right to respect a woman he believes honest, and to doubt others do so in his presence. If there's an old-fashioned Mr. Randolph, come in!"

"Thank you, sir," returned the latter. He rose and put back his hand in his pocket. "I must take leave of you, Mr. Randolph," he added.

The Electric Light in Stage Setting. The beauty of stage setting is being greatly enhanced by electric light devices. For instance, in a play founded on life on the Mississippi, a most realistic bit of scenic detail is introduced.

In the weird opera of "The Flying Dutchman" an extraordinary effect is produced as the phantom ship comes to sight, by the bursting forth from the topmasts and yards of St. Elizabeth's the phenomenon which occurs in the tropics on account of the electrical tension between the earth and the clouds.

Another Wagner opera, "Die Walkure," is indebted to a beautiful received combination of light and sound for one of its most important special features. Clouds of steam are effective in a stage picture on account of their susceptibility of taking the color of calcium or electric lights.

Worked the Two Colors. Roland Reed tells the story of a young man, Jeffrey, who had just returned from Orleans at the same time some other young man, and Mr. Jeffrey was to give a lecture for some hospital, and he requested I also made a few remarks.

Jefferson and I happened to be together in the same time some other young man, and Mr. Jeffrey was to give a lecture for some hospital, and he requested I also made a few remarks.

When I was rector of St. Matthew's, Westminster, Matthew Arnold was the inspector of my national schools, and I was always delighted to see him, and as he examined the list of scholars, many of them among the poorest in grammar or in Latin.

It is said that a queen's unusual courage gave a dowry to his daughter, who married a young barrister, and that the interest in a character sat, and he himself had inherited from his father.
