She had intended not to bring Jocelyn's name into the conversation, but as it had slipped out she now thought it best to say, "It was he who intro-duced me to Gen, Inigo, and he has been acting as my agent-paying me the money. And he said," she added, wishing to do her enemy justice, "that it was by his exertions that Gen. Imigo was permaded to raise my salary after the first

Wallie threw away his eigarette and rubbed his nose. "Well." he said, presently, "I dare say Jocelyn knew what he was about. I should like to hear what he has to say in Inigo's presence. Impresarios and agents are human, and need looking after occasionally."

"What I thought was," she resumed, "that if it should turn out I had no legal right to the money, I should really have to make some more, whether I liked it or not. It would have to be made in some way, you know, and papa-and there seems to be no other way but for me to go on singing, if I can get an engagement

"As to that," said Wallie smiling, "if I wanted to make a fortune I would turn impresario and make you my single investment. Let us assume, for argument's sake, that from the pecuniary standpoint you are perfectly free either to go on or not. Now, of course there are ways in which you might er ltivate music without keeping in opera. You could sing at a church, or, when you felt in the mood, at a private or public concert. But there is something else in the pro-fession besides the singing—there is the audience. Do you know what I mean?"
"Yes," said she, in a low voice.

"It is a magnificent stingulant," he continued. "There is no other to compare with it in the world. They say when you have once felt the delight of it nothing is so difficult as to give it up. There is nothing that you would exchange for it.'

"That is not true!" said she, lifting her head. In a moment she added: "But I have felt that it would be a great con-Wallie glanced up, and she solation."

He rose again from his chair and took another eigarette frem the box on the low bookcase. Then he went to another place for a match, which he scratched underneath the mantelpiece. Then he lit the cigarette and threw the burnt end of the match in the fire, after having shaken it rapidly to and fro to extinguish it. She watched him half absently. thinking what a good fellow he was, how quiet, how honest, how kind, how quick of apprehension. But through him, beyond him, in his place she was another figure, which she never hoped to behold again in reality. Oh, the perversity of human affairs! The goodness that we meet with is not the goodness that we want; the evil that happens to us is not the punishment of Wallie glanced at her through the moke of his cigarette with a sympathetic interest, half sad, half humorous The heavy fur lined cloak that she wore was thrown back on the chair; her head leaned backward, showing the white throat: her richly made, close fitting black dress revealed the lithe beauty of her figure; there was a soft dimness about her eyes; a little strand of bright hair had strayed across her forehead. How mournful she looked! How easily she might be happy! How gladly he would make her so! But those who have the good will have not the power, and those who have the power— "I hope to gracious!" exclaimed Wallie to himself, "that he is suffering the torments of the damned! I may have been a fool in my time, but nothing should ever have made me turn my back on a woman like that!" And he reseated himself with a resentful vehemence that drew a creaking remonstrance from his armchair.

"Do you think, Miss Randolph," he asked, "that the time would ever come when you would prefer the consolation -thing it consoled you for?"

"A consolation is only—a consolation." she replied, with a little smile. "But you must not think that I am-was meaning anything except in a general way. I should only find it more tiresome than usual to have nothing to do now that I know what it is to do something."

"Speaking in a general way, however, don't you think it would be unwise to seek consolation as such until one was quite certain, beyond the possibility of a doubt, that consolation was the thing one needed?"

"Oh, of course there can be no doubt!" she answered. But there was in her tone, and in the sudden, inquiring expansion of her eyes, a feeling less of conviction than of misgiving and suspense, as if the earnest emphasis with which he had spoken had led her to suspect that he might know something of great moment to her. He had no such knowledge, but he had a strong persuasion that she was the victim of a misfortune that might be set right; and he per ceived that the time was now come when he might speak to her openly on the subject which had all along been in both their minds. But as he opened his month to do so there was a knock at the door, and the servant came in with a

"The messenger boy's waiting, sir," he said, "and wants to know if there's an answer.

Tell him," said Wallie sternly, "to go to"— He stopped. The handwriting on the envelope had caught his eye. "If you will excuse me?" he said, glancing at his visitor, while he tore the letter open. He took in its contents with a No answer-I'll answer it in Jools. person," he said to the servant, who with-

"Miss Randolph," said Wallie, stand-ing in front of her with the letter in his hand, and a peculiar smile on his face, "this is from a friend of mine whom you know. There's nothing in it that you may not see; will you read it?"

She took the letter, saw the signature, let her hand fall to her lap for a moment, then lifted it again and read as

DEAR WALLIE—I returned this morning. In treland I met a young fellow named Randolph, with a lady, who turned out to be Mile. Marana I didn't know what to think, but came on at once in order to warn her namesake here. At the hotel I found Randolph and his father. It appears that the former and Marana had arrived a few hours before me on another steamer. Our Marana went out this morning, no one knows where. From something I happened to hear old Randolph say to his son I begin to suspect I have made an astonishing and wicked blunder. I will explain when I see you, which must be at once. The two ladies must not meet at present, if we can help it. If you get this in time meet mo here at I o'clock.

"Shall we go to the hotel together?"

"Shall we go to the hotel together?" said Wallie, when she had read the let-

'No. I cannot see him. Oh, my brother!" she pressed her hands over her face, and bent her head down on the arm of

"I think," said Wallie gently, after a pause, "that Mrs. Dinsmore has just come in. I know she'll want you to stay to lunch. Shall I tell her you're here?"
"Let me go to her," said Beatrix, rising suddenly and moving blindly toward the door. Walliedrew her arm beneath his and led her out. Ten minutes later he was on his way up town.

CHAPTER XIII.

HOW HER BROTHER WAS PUNISHED.

"After afteen minutes I await Gen. In-igo."

When Wallie reached the hotel he met Geoffrey in the vestibule. "You had better have stayed at home and built my cottage for me," remarked the former, as they shook hands. don't do going-to-Europe well."

"I have something to tell"-"I know all about it. I've been chat-ting with the lady the last hour. I'm disappointed in you. You should have married her first, and she would have left the stage of her own accord afterward.

"That was not the question. But how did von know"

"That you wanted to marry her? I am only mad north-northeast. When the wind is in the south * * * But she's too good for you.'

"The point is, that she is the daugh-

"Great Scott! Do you mean to say you didn't know who she is?" "Did you?" "I? Of course. I knew the other one in the first place. But didn't she tell

'Do you suppose," said Geoffrey gravely, "that I would have gone to Europe if I had known that the man whom I saw " " that there was all that "that I would have gone to Europe mystery about, was her own father?" Wallie stared at his friend a moment and then laughed. "This is very sad," said he. "And, if I am not mistaken, you were with me that day when Randolph came in and gave himself away-However! What are you going to do?"

"The real Marana is here, or rather, at the Albemarle. I want to know what she is going to do. She may decide to make trouble."

"There is one obstacle in her way, fortunately."

What? "Well, it would be awkward for her to prosecute the sister of her lover. He is her lover only in the sense that he wants to marry her. "What about that hundred thousand dellars he got rid of?"

"It is as I say, nevertheless." And Geoffrey gave his friend a synopsis of what Helwise had told him on the sub-

"In that case there is all the more reason for her to keep quiet," said Wallie.
"Then why did she come to America?"

Geoffrey inquired: "Have you seen her on the subject?"
"I have had no opportunity yet."

"Well, leave it to me. You are not a diplomatist. This young Randolph has got himself in a nice position! If Miss Beatrix was not his sister, or if Marana were not his lady love, he could take a hand on one side or the other; but as it is he's helpless both ways. I should think he would feel tired. What sort of a fellow is he?"

"He seemed well enough the little I've seen of him." "I see: you think of him as your future brother-in-law," said Wallie smiling.

"But don't be too comfortable. That young lady is not to be played fast and

"Oh, I'm not comfortable!" said Geoffrey gloomily.

"Well, I won't hit you while you're down, but if you get up again, look out!

Where is this young scamp?"
"Up stairs, I believe, with his father." "I'll have a back at him, to begin with. You may as well keep yourself to yourself until you hear from me again. We can't afford any more blunders."

Naming a Burmese Baby.

A Burmese baby when a fortnight old is named. On the auspicious day, which the astrologer has selected, there is a feast to which relatives and friends have been invited. The baby's head is washed for the first time, and his name is chosen. An English lady residing in Burma describes the process of select ing the name:

The limits of the choice are determined by the day of the week upon which he was born. Burmese custom divides the letters of the alphabet among the days of the week, and a child born on Monday must receive a name initialed by one of the letters belonging to that day.

Ka, kha, ga, gha, nga, Taninla Sa, hsa, za, zha, nya, Ainga-Ta, tha, da, dha, na, Sanay, is the beginning of a jingle which every Burmese child learns, as you and I learned, "Thirty days bath September, April, June and November."

A child born on Taninla (Monday) must have a name beginning with "k," "g" or "n," and when he is old enough to go to the pagedas the nature of the offering be carries, or rather its shape, is determined by the day of his birth.

Each day of the week is under the protection or subject to the fury of some animal. The tiger rules Monday, and a Burman born on Monday will offer to Gautama a candle shaped like a tiger and fashioned of scarlet or of yellow wax. Tuesday belongs to the king of beasts, Wednesday is the tusked elephant's, Thursday is sacred to the rat and Friday to the guinea pig. The drag-on dominates Saturday, and Sunday is dedicated to another fabulous creature, half bird, half beast .- Youth's Companion. The Ladies of Constantinople,

It was amusing to see negresses with the thickest of lips veiled. All the pretty faces were more or less painted and the cyclids and cycbrows penciled. The quality of the paint showed the quality of the lady. Poor women daub themselves with horrid pigments. No Turkish gentleman goes out to walk with his wife. To do so would be counted in the highest degree absurd. At most she is followed by a slave. But, wrapped up in the ugly black silk feridje, she can gowhere she pleases and alone. No man would dream of looking at a veiled lady in a feridje. Were a Giaour to scan her face, he would run a risk of being massacred. Shopping is a feminine pastime. Another is holding receptions, which, of course, ladies only attend. Munching sweetmeats renders Constantinople belles grossly fat while still young and rather spoils their teeth. All over the east teeth are even, white and of medium size and mouths well shaped. They are mouths made for laughter, gormandizing and sensual love. Eastern women are far better looking in youth than western. Those of Stamboul are the least graceful. They are seldom neat about the ankles. Their stockings are not well drawn up, their shoes are a 9 world too big, and their gait is heavy 6 " and shuffling. - London Truth.

"Often," said the Cumminsville sage, "a man gets credit for having sense enough to say nothing, when the truth is that he hasn't sense enough to say anything."-Cincinnati Enquirer.

Wine bottles are best cleaned with charcoal, broken in small pieces, and a little powdered charcoal left in bottles for a day or two will effectually remove eny unpleasant odor.

RECKLESS NAT GOODWIN.

An Illustration of How the Comedian Has

Money to Burn. A story I have just heard anent Nat Boodwin is but another instance of his reckless generosity and constant desire to burn money upon all possible occa-

Not had been in the habit of passing part of his time at a certain hostelrythat is all the description necessary of the place—presided over by a fat, good natured German. They had known each other well and were on excellent terms. It came about one day, during the breaching of a bill, that Mr. Goodwin disputed an item of $50. In doing so he was merally certain that the indebted-

The dispute waxed hot and heavy.

"See here," said Goodwin, "I don't care for a trifling amount like $50. It's the principle of the thing, that's all. the principle of the thing."

"Der same vay mit me," retorted the landlord, "I dond't care me for $100,-

"Perhaps not," doubted the comedian. "But I'd sooner throw the money away or burn it than give it to you when I den't owe it to you."

"Ah," exclaimed the German sarcas-tically. "You hat money to purn, ch? Vell, I dond't pelieve me dot." "Is that so?" returned Nat. "Well, now, I'll tell you what I'll do with you. I'll burn $50 right here before your eyes if you'll receipt the bill." "By Chiminy!" said the host, "Pil yoost go you vence,"

Without another word Nat Goodwin took his checkbook out of his pocket, filled out a check for $50, tore it out. applied a lighted match to it, and held it until it was reduced to ashes. The German, who had watched the process with bulging eyes, banged a rubber stamp on the disputed bill, scrawled his signature across it and SHAKING WITH 60,000. The "God Bless You!" of Honest Hearted People a Renediction.

In an article describing "The Social Life of the President" in The Ladies Home Journal ex-President Harrison tells of the fatigues of handshaking and also of the benefits of being brought in contact with the good, honest hearted people of the country. "In the first two weeks of an administration," he says, "the president shakes hands with from 40,000 to 60,000 persons. The physical drain of this is very great, and if the president is not an instructed handshaker a lame arm and a swollen hand soon result. This may be largely or entirely avoided by using President Hayes' method-take the band extended to you and grip it before your hand is gripped. It is the passive band that gets hurt. It has been suggested that a nod or bow should be substituted for the handshake, but it would be quite as admissible to suggest a revision of the Declaration of Independence.

"The interest which multitudes attach to a handshake with the president is so great that people will endure the greatest discomfort and not a little peril to life or limb to attain it. These are not the office seekers, but the good, honest hearted, patriotic people whose 'God. bless you' is a prayer and a benediction. They come to Washington for the inauguration, and later with excursions, but they are mostly to be found near their own homes. They come out to meet the president when he takes a journey, and his contact with them and their unselfish and ever affectionate interest in him revive his courage and elevate his purposes. Mr. Lincoln is: said to have called these popular receptions his 'public opinion baths.'"
