A FAMOUS OLD MINER.

EDWARD SCHIEFFFLIN ONE OF TOMB-STONE'S DISCOVERERS.

True Stories of a Most Typical Western Prospector-How the Schleffelin Brothers and Dick Gird Struck It Rich In Tombstone Gulch.

The Pacific coast newspapers have been full of stories about Edward Schieffelin, one of the discoverers of the Tombstone mines, who was found dead in a cabin in eastern Oregon. His remains, according to his wish, now rest upon the top of a granite peak two miles west of Tombstone, A. T. He de-sired, he said, "to be buried in the garb of a prospector, my old pick and canteen with me, and a monument such as prespectors build when locating a mining claim built over my grave and no other monument or slab erected."

It seems to be generally felt throughout the Pacific coast that this plain. ignerant, kind hearted old pioneer and prospector, who had traveled many thousands of miles in search of new mines, has thus unconsciously made his upon our romance and history. That lonely granite cairn in the desert, rising upon the extreme point of a treeless promontory, will long be pointed out as the grave of one of the most famous of American prospectors. Ed Schieffelin's one great strike yielded him fully a third of $1,000,000. At various times in his adventurous career he plodded painstakingly over the wildest portions of the Rocky mountains and Sierras, he visited Alaska, Mexico, South America and South Africa, but never again found such a mine. When he died, his fortune, at one time said to be over $500,000, had greatly decreased by reason of bad investments and costly expeditions. The story of the finding of Tomb-stone, that briefly famous Arizonian mining city, has been told in many different ways, until it is fast becom ing one of the most attractive of Pacific coast myths. The simple facts are that Inte in the seventies the two Schieffelin brothers and Dick Gird were prospecting, sometimes together, sometimes separately, in various districts of Arina and New Mexico. It was a time of terrible Indian outbreaks, and the Apaches were on the warpath, killing Ionely miners and prospectors, attack ing the stage coaches and running off cattle. Ed Schieffelin finally wandered into the neighborhood of a disputed claim, the Bronco, where eight men had been shot in various attempts to decide its ownership, and was hired at $2 a day to sit on a hilltop and look out for Indians. One day, while hunting up a stray horse, the hitherto unsuccessful prospector stumbled into what was afterward called Tombstone Gulch and found some copper stained rock on what became the Tough Nut mine. This be sent to Gird for an assay, and soon after sent ore from the Lucky Cuss. When development was begun, a thin vein in granite widened, and promised immense riches. The claims were sold for very large sums, and when the Apaches were driven out capitalists poured money into the district. But the mines did not justify expectations. Tombstone was very far from being a second Comstock. The unlucky Broncho never paid a dollar. The Schieffelin and Gird claims vielded for a time but soon ran out, and the camp sank into decay.

The first time I met Schieffelin, that most typical of western prospectors, was about six years ago. After hearing some of his picturesque prospector yarns I told him about the various treasure expeditions to Coos island and the legends which had caused these excitements. He seized upon the glitter-ing tale of diamond hilted swords, bags bloons and bars of gold with the faith of a child and at once offered to fit out a schooner for the islands and to pay my expenses as well as give me a third of the treasure if I would go along third of the treasure if I would go along to repeat the legend as often as desired. He had prospected for almost every-thing, he said, except pirate treasures, and he wanted those diamond hilted swords to "put in his parlor." I did not know at that time the story about his parlor. Having bought a $7,000 honse in the town of Alameda, he kept several tops of quark in one he kept several tons of quarts in one corner, on top of which his old pros-pecting tools, burro's saddle and camp pecting tools, burro's saddle and camp outfit reposed when not in use. I never heard what his wife thought of this unique furniture, but there is no doubt that the diamond hilted swords would have rested peacefully on the quarts plie, and it was with sincere regrets that I acknowledged to him my entire lack of faith in the picturesque Spanish lagend of Coos island. agend of Coos island. Schieffelin's Alaska experiences have ang deserved a chronicler. He fitted out an expedition years ago and pros-pected over vast areas of that region. TIME'S CREASES.

The Origin and Progress of the Wrinkles

We all become interested sooner or later in the subject of wrinkles. They are the "'irreparable outrage" of Racine, but although they are so univer-sal few have endeavored to explain their origin and progress. Wrinkles are pro-duced in the first instance by the frequent repetition of some muscular con-traction or by sickness. They are not merely superficial, but appear when the epidermis is removed, and are found not only in the face, but all over the body. They do not run in any regular direction, and no law has been found including all their directions. It has been said that the life history of a man can be written from his wrinkles, but physiology hardly agrees in this in-stance, for it has still to be proved that a general's wrinkles differ from those of a physician's, or a laborer's from a lawyer's. A man does not always or even generally carry about a faithful autobiography in his face. Although no part of the body is free from them they visit chiefly the face, particularly round the eyes and lips. They run in all di-rections — horizontal, vertical and oblique, straight, curved and crossed Going in the sun with the face insuili ciently covered brings them on prematurely, but they are in every case normal at 40 or even earlier.

Vertical wrinkles between the eyes come quickly to men who study or wor-ry themselves. This can readily be imagined. The eyebrows contract natural ly when in deep thought. Grief or wor-ry produces the same action, which. when repeated frequently, produces a fold in the skin, marking emotion undergone many times. Between these and the straight lines on the forehead, already mentioned, come the arched wrinkles of the forehead, found above the root of the nose. These often tell of long and painful mental torture. They arise from a cruel physical suffering on of still more great development of the vertical wrinkles and the resistance of the skin above.

The crow's feet mark the passing of the fortieth year and are characterized by furrows which diverge from the external angles of the eyes in all direc-tions, like the claws of a bird, from which they are named. The wrinkles of the nose, which descend from the nostrils down each side of the mouth, are, perhaps, the first to appear. There furrows are created in laughing and mastication. A simple smile is suffcient to produce them, so it is not sur-prising that the repetition of the commonest acts should soon be graven on the face. They are also hereditary. Th wrinkles of the cheeks and chin follow the oval of the face and are caused by a diminution of the fatty substance under the skin, which then falls into folds. The small wrinkles which form a network in the lower parts of the checks near the cars have the same origin and only appear in old age. Those found in the upper cyclids and sometimes in the lower, which give the eyes an air of fatigue, are the results of hard living, grief or worry.-New York dger.

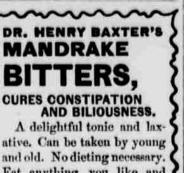

KNOW THEIR POWERS.

The Eternal Womanly In the Rough Girls of New York.

In the girls of the rougher tenement house districts the eternal womanly wears such a disguise of the eternal gamin that it cannot always be recognized. Their pertness and sauciness are only sharpened by their precocity and their tomboy habits of street Arabia. A reporter recently had occasion to visit lower Washington street to ascertain the facts regarding the murder of a boy down there. He was obtaining his information from the boys of the neighborhood, who might have been playmates of the dead youth. A circle of them, together with three or four girls of 15 or 16 years, was gathered around him. A big, hulking youth about 20 years old arrogated to himself the place of aroganet to was evidently the ty-rant, the bully of the street, a young "Bill the Brute," who had not yet ac-quired a wife to beat and was consequently an object of great interest to these misses, whose skirts had not yet grown down to their ankles. With his grown down to their ankles. With his big, harsh voice he silenced every inter-ruption of his tale, saying: "Shot up there! I'm tellin this yarn." Of course this adjuration, which forms a part of the ordinary courtesy of the neighborhood, did not quiet the girls. They chaffed him and the report-er and eigended until at last the smaaker gris. They chaffed him and the report-er and giggled until at last the speaker said to the reporter: "Don't mind them. They're no 'count. They're nothin but girls." "Of course he'll mind us, smarty." instantly retorted one of the girl. "We's the makin's of ladies." It was the sternal womania of start

It is a mistake to suppose that the only way to be good looking is to be born so. Good health has more to do with good looks than anything else. Du Maurier Heroines

When Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett was first presented to Du Maurier, who was first presented to Du Maurier, who was, in point of fact, rather an under-sized man, she exclaimed: "Oh, I am so glad that you are not six feet tall!" "But why?" asked Du Maurier. "Because for these many months," replied Mrs. Burnett, who is consider-ably helow medium, height "you have

"Oh, that is only a trick of mine!" laughed Du Maurier. "I have started again and again to make my heroine a little woman, but before I know it she has somehow grown way beyond my own recognition."-American Queen.
