Skipped His Boarding. The first of last week a peddler, claiming to be a Frenchman, came to Reynoldsville and asked the preachers of town to give him names of some of the "four hundred," as he had some fine goods to sell, such as dollies, table covers, &c., and as his time was precious he wanted to call on those he thought would be likely to buy. The peddler secured boarding with a family on Jackson street, where he remained until Friday evening and then skipped the town without paying his board bill.

Monday morning when the 6.44 east-bound train arrived in Reynoldsville a trunk was tossed into the baggage car and the baggage-master grabbed it in the usually careful manner and tumbled it into one corner of the car when an explosion occurred and the bottom was blown out of the trunk. It is hardly necessary to add that the baggage-master was a badly scared man. The trunk was the property of a colored man, and when asked to explain he said there were some matches and powder in the trunk.

Warning to Boys and Girls. There was just enough snow and ice on the sidewalks last Saturday to give the boys and girls an opportunity to break ordinance No. 43, which was passed by the town council in September of this year. The ordinance declares it unlawful to coast or skate on any of the sidewalks within this borough, and the fine for violating the ordinance is not less than $1.00 nor more than $10.00. We heard several parties say that they would see that the ordinance was enforced in front of their property at least, and so we give the boys and girls warning, as we don't want to see any of them arrested.

Lost in the Woods. Saturday four lovers of the chase hid away to the woods west of town to slaughter any kind of game that might come within range of their weapons of warfare. All went well for a few hours. The joy of the sport, however, had a sudden ending when it was discovered that one of the party, while circumambulating through the woods, had gotten lost. The trio got on the trail of their lost companion and discovered, by the long strides made, that he was hastening into the forest in the opposite direction from home. They could not overtake him, but kept up the hunt until the evening shadows compelled them to return to Reynoldsville weary, footsore and depressed, without their companion.

E. congregation in this place when the present M. E. church was built. The church has since been enlarged. Sixteen years ago Rev. Plannett closed his pastorate in Reynoldsville. Since then he has been presiding elder on various districts in Dakota. He has always been a very hard worker and the work on the frontier and the severe climate of that section broke down his health so that he was compelled to give up his work and take a trip to recuperate. At present they have no abiding place and don't know where they will locate. They do not expect to go back to Dakota. Their two sons are at San Francisco, Cal. Rev. and Mrs. Plannett's old friends in this place were glad to see them.

The Horse Was Not Stolen.

When Squire John Coax's barn burned it was supposed that a horse was consumed in the flames along with the barn, but since the fire a search was made for the bones of the animal and the result was that not a trace of the horse was to be found. Now it is thought that the horse was stolen and the barn fired by the thief in order to give him a chance to get away before being discovered.—Reynoldsville correspondent to DuBois Courier.

There is little doubt but that Squire John T. Coax's barn was struck by a bolt of lightning on the morning of 9th inst., and it is probable that the family horse was killed by the lightning, for when Charles Coax got to the barn he could see the horse stretched out in the stall and that there was no sign of a struggle. After the fire a portion of the animal's body that had not been burned was buried. The Courier's correspondent got his information from an untrustworthy source.

Added More Laurels.

One of the greatest hits of any season was that of last evening. Fred Emerson Brooks added more laurels to those he won last week. He held the closest attention of the audience from beginning to end—now stirring them with some patriotic sentiment, now bringing the tear with a touch of pathos, now by wit and humor causing uncontrollable laughter. He has a field which is all his own and in which he has no superior.—South Farmingham Chautauque. At Assembly hall Friday night, Nov. 19th. Tickets on sale at Stoke's drug store.

Loved Whisky Better Than a Home.

Not many moons ago an old soldier made application, through the Woman's Relief Corps of this place, for admission into the Memorial Home at Brookville. When the necessary papers arrived and Notary Public Albert Reynolds read them to the applicant he refused, point blank, to become an inmate of the Home because he was forbidden indulgence in the cup that intoxicates. He preferred to be buffeted from pillar to post, that he might get on an occasional drunk, rather than have a good home and do without liquor.

WAS A PATIENT SUFFERER.

Death Resulted from Painter's Paralysis—Large Funeral.

Andrew August Kleinhaus, a respected citizen of Reynoldsville, died at his home on Main street on the evening of Wednesday, November 10th, after long, weary months of intense suffering. Thirteen months ago he was stricken with painter's paralysis, which finally resulted in breaking the silken thread of life. A few weeks ago Mr. Kleinhaus had regained sufficient strength to get around a little on crutches, which inspired him with hope that he might yet be restored to health, but two weeks ago he took a relapse and then hope vanished. Through the long weeks of suffering he was patient and uncomplaining. On Wednesday he seemed to realize that the sands of life were almost run, and yet he did not fear the "valley of death." He called his wife and son, Arthur, into his bedroom on the afternoon of that day and had them bow at his bedside while he offered an earnest and pathetic petition to the Heavenly Father, asking Him to watch over and protect his wife and child. About 5.00 P. M., his eyesight failed and his ears were deaf to the voice of loved ones, and thus he lingered until 8.30 P. M., when dissolution took place.

August Kleinhaus was born in Youngstown, Ohio, March 26th, 1857, and was 40 years, 7 months and 23 days old when he died. He came to Reynoldsville in 1879. His occupation was coal mining, which he was compelled to abandon four years ago on account of falling health. He then began painting and kept at it until disabled by painter's paralysis, thirteen months ago. Mr. Kleinhaus was married to Sarah Margaret Marshall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Marshall of this place, October 14th, 1886. Until their one son was born who is now nine years old. The deceased had been an active and faithful member of the Knights of Pythias and Patriotic Order Sons of America, and was a Post Officer in both lodges. These lodges attended his funeral.

Funeral services were held in the M. E. church at 2.30 P. M., Friday, Dr. C. C. Rumberger, pastor of the church, conducted the opening services, and Rev. James H. Jelbart, pastor of the M. E. church at Johnsonburg, preached the sermon. The deceased and Rev. Jelbart had been warm friends and it had been Mr. Kleinhaus' request that he preach his funeral sermon. A large congregation was present. After singing "Asleep in Jesus," prayer and scripture lesson and singing, "Jesus Lover of My Soul," then Rev. Jelbart preached an excellent sermon, full of consolation and beautiful thought, from Psa. 46: 1, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in time of trouble." The mortal remains of Mr. Kleinhaus were buried in the Reynoldsville cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

"The World Against Her."

"The World Against Her," regarded by many as one of the best melo-dramas on the boards, will be the attraction at the Reynolds opera house, Reynoldsville, Friday evening, Nov. 19th. Here is a play in which pathos and comedy are artistically mingled. Laughter is supreme yet tears are brought to many eyes. No more wholesome or pure drama was ever seen, and one would indeed be lacking in human sympathy who could not enjoy this simple but powerful dramatic tale. To those with hearts full of the milk of human kindness, a great treat is in store. The plot, as worked out in incidents, situations and dialogue, appeals strongly to the sympathies of men, women and children alike, exciting the purest emotions of human nature. It abounds in scenes that are highly exciting, and in one the husband and villain engage in a pitched battle, fighting for the possession of the child of the woman who has the "World Against Her." A large number of amusing and up-to-date specialties are introduced to give it a flavor of fun.
