The Oyster.

The sentiment which annually greets the return of the oyster from its summer vacation may not be of an esthetic sort, but certainly it is as remote as possible from mercenary considerations of commerce. And yet the oyster not only stands for a great delicacy, but for a great industry that will in time be vasily greater. It is shown by Government statistics, for instance, that of the 35,000,000 hushels of oysters consumed throughout the world each year 30,000,000 bushels are supplied by the United States, and that the oyster fishery excels any other fishery in impor-tance. Add to this that the industry is especially important in the States of New Jersey and Maryland-the latter alone producing one-third of the world's crop-and it will be seen that there are special reasons why Philadelphia should be cordial to the oyster, and should greet its advent with a degree of effusiveness not extended to any other thing in the edible list with the possible exception of the Thanksgiving tur-key.-Philadelphia Record.

Tirs. T. A. WALDEN, Gibson, Ga., writes:

" DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: Before taking your medicine, life was a burden to me. I never saw a well day. At my monthly period I suffered untold misery, and a great deal of the time I was troubled with a severe pain in my side. Before finishing the first bottle of your Vegetable Compound I could tell it was doing me good. I continued its use, also used the Liver Pills and Sanative Wash, and have been greatly helped. I would like to have you use my letter for the benefit of others."

Eyes Not Necessary.

Eyes are popularly considered to be quite necessary to sight, but this is an error, if we are to believe Dr. Nagel, a recent German experimenter. Many creatures without eyes can see; at least they can distinguish perfectly well between light and darkness and even between different degrees of light. This is the lowest degree of seeing, to be sure, but still it is really sight, and differing scarcely more from the vision of some insects that possess eyes than this does from our own clear sight.

Creatures that see without eyes see by means of their skins. All skins, says Dr. Nagel, are potential eyes; that is, they are sensitive to light. In animals that have eyes the sensitiveness has been highly localized and greatly increased-so that man, for instance, has a retina very sensitive to light, and an expanse of ordinary skin which possesses a sensitiveness to light so slight that it is hardly conscious of it. Yet his skin is sensitive in some degree, as is proved by the fact that it sunburns -that is, light may cause a disting ance in the pigment of the skin just as it does in that of the eye. In the eye the disturbance is accompanied by a nervous change, which sends a telegraphic message along the optic nerves. and there are messages, also, but their tidings imprint no image on the mind; they simply express discomfort-cry "sunburn." out

But in many cycless creatures the lack of eyes is in part made up by increased sensitiveness of the whole skin surface to light. Darwin long ago no ticed that earth worms, although they bave no eyes, will suddenly withdraw into their holes at the approach of a lighted candle. Some creatures seem most sensitive to sudden increase of light; others to sudden diminution.

A Home-Grown Experience.

A man went into an icehouse to cool off.

An abrupt and impetuous hired man closed and locked the door and went away. The next day was Sunday and the bired man did not come back. While the man who yearned to cool off walted for the return of the hired man his object was accomplished in a very thorough manner. He cooled off The muffled door gave back but schoes to his blows, and his voice could find no place to escape and sound the alarm.

When he grew tired of walking and swinging his arm to keep warm the chunks of ice that were piled around him did not offer a tempting bed. Hunger gnawed at his vitals and refused to be satisfied with diet of raw air. Darkness settled down like a six months Arctic night, and the only sound which broke the profound stillness was the man who wanted to cool off trying to swear.

The hired man opened the door on Monday morning, and the man who wanted to cool off crawled out more dead than alive.

When his tongue had thawed out he began to abuse the bired man. "Fool?" retorted the hired man.

"Fool, you are a lucky dog and do not know it. Don't waste your time in abusing me, your benefactor, but go and write a book of impressions on Alaska."

Then the man who wanted to cool off saw that his fortune was made .- Chi cago Record.

Ormondes and Desmonds Had Quar reled for Six Centuries. It is seldom in this workaday age that one encounters a genuine family feud inherited from sire to son through no less than six centuries. Such a feud actually existed in the dominions of Queen Victoria until a short time ago, and its final settlement was brought about by the ingeniousness of a boy of 9.

The two leading Anglo-Irish families in Ireland had long been the FitzGeralds and the Butlers. From being comrades in arms of the invading Strongbow they became by degrees rival barous and flerce contestants for the vice sovereignty of their adopted country. In the wars of the roses the Butlers sided with the white rose of Lancaster, the FitzGeralds with the red rose of York. Factions gathered around the two great houses and the bitter feud brought forth death and bloodshed from as early as 1250 down to the Williamite wars. The Butlers, whose chief had obtained the dignity of Earl of Ormonde, succeeded in crushing the power of the elder branch of the Fitz-Gerulds, Earls of Desmond. It is told of a warlike Desmond that while being borne prisoner on the locked shields of his feudal foe's clansmen the Butlers taunted him with the bitter words: "Where is now the proud FitzGer-410.72

To which the indomitable earl an swored:

"FitsGerald is where he ought to be on the necks of the Butlers.' This proud reply will give an idea of the intensity of the strife. Now, it happened that her majesty's Irish viceroy gave a garden party in the vicerogal lodge at Dublin, and thither were bidden by accident the Marquis of Ormonde, head of the Butler family (familiar to the Americans through his yachting interests), and the little Duke of Leinster, boyish chieftain of the house of FitzGerald. With the duke, who was not quite 9 years of age, came his widowed mother, one of ...e beautiful Duncombe sisters,
