THE BEAUTY.

Hail! Now she speaks.
The roses ope their ruddy hearts to list.
The breezes cease to coax the lily bells
To sound their voiceless chime.

And when she smiles
The like the break of day
O'er Persian valleys faint with odor sweet Or like entraneing melody Conjured by master hand from strings Aglow with heavenly fire.

And when she laughs—
Ah, then, the ricipling music of her mirth
Awakens sleeping joy, deep toned and ful
Of love as belts enriched with gold
On Moscow's towers swung!
—Ernest Jarrold in Yellow Book.

OLD MESA LIFE.

The Pueblo Woman Was Always the Hea-of the Household.

When the men went down to the fields, the pueblo was really in contro of its rightful owners, the women. It these old communities the woman was the important partner in the household She was the owner of the house and all it contained. She built it and furnished it with its utensils of daily use. The children traced descent through the mother and took her clan name. The man's position, other than mere provider, was that of an honored guest, and if he presumed disagreeably on his position more likely than not he was sent back to his own home. Far from being the general slave and pack animal that is her sister of the plains tribes, the Pueblo woman's duties were purely domestic, and if she ever worked in the field it was for the common good, to save the scanty harvest in the of need.

The grinding of the sale colored corn for bread, the weaven, and the making of pottery were her principal pecupations, and are to this day. The Pueblo Indians and par excellence the potters of the southwest, and it will be confessed that they come fairly by the title, as an examination of some of the old time ware will prove, although in this case, as in some others, the evolu-tion has not been for the better.

In the small house cell or in the white sunlight the potter sat, and, with scarcely any tools at all, fashioned such specimens of the potter's art as to challenge admiration from us with all our appliances. The use of the potter's wheel was unknown, and the "throwing" of a shape by this means out of the question; but with a hollow bit of basketware or a piece of broken pot for a sup-port all the forms from a simple food bowl up to the largest and most elaborate water jars were built up by coil on coil of clay, smoothed or modeled in pattern as the vessel grew, and when one examines some of the ancient pieces, notably those excavated by Dr. Fewkes of the Smithsonian institution, one can

Then came the decorating, and in every case, from the simplest to the most elaborate and intricate symbolic design, one must confess that the Indian uses the truest inceptive and fundamental art principles. There never is any waste of energy in "effect." The design always means a concrete thing, which appeals to the understanding of the Indians for whose use the utensils are. Through these same pottery forms and their decoration runs one of the strongest chains binding the old to the new. Near me are two tinajas, or water jars. One is many generations, perhaps centuries, old, the other perhaps five years, and yet in shape and general decoration they are much alike, and if the newer one was properly "toned" they would pass as of the same period.—Fernand Lungren in Century.

French Ghost Hunters.

Members of our own Society of Psychical Research, which, by the way, has not been much in evidence of late, should be interested in the fate which has befallen the French body with identical aims known as La Societe des Sciences Psychiques. The latter has just been reduced to a state of hopeless disruption by the conduct of a section of its adherents who, presumably weary of confining their psychical researches to the chasing of elusive 'spooks," have gone astray after such livelier branches of occult science as the preparation of talismans, the con-cotting of love philters and the telling

The earnest ghost hunters, disgusted by this descent to the methods of the common or commercial charlatan, have resigned in a body and formed a new society of their own. It is by no means certain, however, that these who remain have not proved themselves wiser in their generation than the seceders, for, while ghosts are unmistakably "off" in these days, the interest in other forms of mystical quackery seems to be as strong and widespread as ever.—London World.

Throneroom of Spain

The throneroom of Spain is a magnif-icent apartment of crimson and gold, with colossal mirrors and a chandelier with colossal mirrors and a chandelier of rock crystal that is considered the finest example of the kind in the world. Under the gorgeous canopy are two large chairs handsomely carved and gilded and upholstered in crimson brocade. These are the thrones of Spain, where the boy king and queen rigent sit on occasions of ceremony. Sometimes the daughters stand beside their mother, when it is proper for all the royal family to receive the court.—International Magazine.
