THE EDITORS' FAREWELL.

THE EDITORS' FAREWELL.

Goodby, kind friends, we're going to let some vacant places.

Although it stirs our ire
To go on higher, higher,
And leave here as a token
Of love and faith unbroken,
These fruits and spoils of literary graces;
Let others come up higher,
Who have a fend desire
To make a reputation,
And spread o'er all creation
Such works as made us famous in our places.
As down and out we go
To—well you surely know
It isn't to a place of sad disgraces,
Don't watch to see us try
To hide a parting cry
When said our last good bye:
The worthy shun the past without a sigh.
Now we will baye a trial

The worthy shun the past without a sigh.

Now we will have a trial
To sit and read awhile
The things the rest compile.
And thus the time begulfe.
And smile and smile and smile,
When once we're lodged in realms a little higher.
Don't mourn when we are gone.
Nor praise our names in song.
But push this work along—
To make this small request is our desire.
But here our musings ther,
While office terms expire.
While office terms expire.
And great events hang fire,
More than to say good bye or
Tell you something, prior
To the parting and departure of Smith, Coleman, McEntire.

Next work there will be a change.

Next week there will be a change made in the editorial staff of this column. It is hoped that the change will be for the better. The present staff will, no doubt, be glad to resign in favor of others. The work of editing this column has been no small task when the students failed to contribute liberally. It is to be hoped that the staff which is to be will have greater succes than the staff that has been.

It is being recognized by some of the scholars that this work is as much for their benefit as for the benefit of the editors. We earnestly desire that all to buy it. There's value in will co-operate with the editors hereafter to make of our journalistic enterprise a more brilliant success than our feeble efforts have been able to accomplish heretofore.

From my heart I give thee lov:

There is, as we all know, or as we should know, a period for study and a period for recitation. Some of the pupils of the High School endeavor to do their studying during the time for recitation. The recitation period is too short for both and those who are by ing to study and recite at the same time will be sorry when examination day arrives. Much better for all concerned if the studying and reciting were done at separate times.

THE CUMBERLAND.

At anchor in Hampton Roads we lay On heard of the Cumberland, sloop-of war, And at times from the fortress agrees

the bay
The alarum of drums swept past
Or a brigle blast
From the camp on the shore.

Then for away to the south up rose
A little feather of snow white smoke,
And we knew that the Iron ship of our

fors
Was straigly steering its course
To try the force
Of our rite of oak.

Down upon us heavily runs, Silent and sulien, the floating fort; Then comes a pull of smoke from her And leaps the terrible death, With nery breath, From each open port. We are not idle, but send her straight

Defince back in a full broadside!
As hall rebounds from a roof of slate
Rebounds our bander hall
From each from each
Of the monster's hide.

"Strike your flog!" the rebel cries "Strike your flog!" the robel cries
In his arrogant old plantation strain.
"Never!" our gallant Morris replies,
"It is better to sink that to yield?"
And the whole air pealed
With the cheers of our men.

Then like a kraken huge and binck

She crushed our ribs in her iron grasp,
Down went the Cumberland all a wrack,
With a sudden shudder of death
And the cannon's breath
For her dying gasp.

Next morn, as the sun rose over the bay, Still floated our flag at the mainm. head
Lord, how beautiful was thy day!
Every waft of the nir
Was a whisper of prayer
Or a dirge for the dead.

Ho, brave hearts that went down in the sens!

Ye are at peace in the troubled stream.

Ho, brave land, with hearts like these.

Thy flag, that is rent in twain,

Shall be one again.

And without a seam! -Longfellow

"FILLED" BEDCLOTHES.

They Are Moisture Attractors, and

Science, thy name is adulteration! Another terror has been added to existence by the revelations made by a trade paper of the processes by which certain manufacturers "fill' the sheets and blankets with which they flood the mar-

We are told that after a piece of waste cheeting has been woven the cloth is passed over a trough containing a solution of zine, sulphate of magnesia (commonly known as epsom salts) and water. This is called a sprinkler. A revolving brush plays a spray of these noxious ingredients upon the cloth, with the result that a 50 pound piece after the operation weighs 7 1/2 pounds more than when it left the loom. As the goods are sold by the pound, the object is evident. But what about the purchaser? A piece cuts up into ten pairs of sheets. Each pair therefore contains three-quarters of a pound of moisture attracting material. The results are appalling. As soon as a wet day comes the sheets become damp and the luckless wight who sleeps between them is apt to conbourn whence no traveler returns. Even if his suspicions are aroused and he boldly casts aside the sheets and wraps himself in the blankets it may avail him nothing, for the blanket makers have learned the trick, and the same ill results may ensue. Next we shall hear that the counterpane makers are equally astute, and the timid sleeper may be driven to provide himself with the woolen sleeping bags that suggest travels in the farthest north. The only advantage of these "filled" or heavily "sized" sheets and blankets is that they are death to me sects, but if they kill the sleeper as well as the pulex irritans-to say nothing of the cimex lectularius—what boots it?—London Telegraph.

A Financial Embarrassment.

A lady who had a kindly remem-brance for all her domestic servants met an erstwhile washerwoman and stopped to ask her how she fared. 'Oh, mem, it's turrible finanshul distbress me an the childer's in!'

"Why, what is it-are you out of employment?"
"No, mem; work's in a fair state o' stiddiness, and not a cint do I owe, but it's lashins o' trouble I've got!" Are you not paid promptly?" "As promptly as the day cooms round."

"What is your financial distress, then?"

"Well, mem" (in a burst of horror), "what's killin me is, I carn $6 the week an pay $8 for me boord, an God only knows how I do it!" Short

Says a dealer in antiquities: "I had a fat woman in here the other day. Well, sir, she was a caution, was that fat woman. She would have the antique all through her house, sir, nothing but the antique for her house decoration.
