Cam. Mitchell, Esq., is one of the most genial members of the Jefferson county bar, as any one can prove by spending an hour with him in conversation.—Brookville Democrat. Mr. Mitchell is one of the "legal lights" of Reynoldsville.

The convention of the Washington Township Sunday School Association, held in the M. E. church at Falls Creek last Thursday, was an interesting, instructive and pleasant convention. The afternoon and evening sessions were attended by large crowds. All who took part in the convention handled their subjects in a masterly way.

Charles A. Herpel was around town yesterday in the interest of the water company inspecting pipes and finding out, as far as possible, how many people leave their water spigots open continually during the cold snaps to keep the pipes from freezing up. So many people left spigots open Sunday night that the water supply in the reservoir was exhausted Monday morning.

Dr. J. Curtis Sayers, one of Reynoldsville's leading physicians came down to Hawthorn Saturday for consultation on the case of Miss Precious, who was in a precarious condition from diphtheria. Dr. Sayers was formerly a Clarion county boy and his many friends in this section will be glad to know that he is enjoying a large practice and is a leader in his chosen profession.—New Bethlehem Indicator.

The remains of a baby, one week old, were brought from Avamore, Pa., last Friday and buried in Prospect cemetery. Black Eyes for One.

Five employees of the silk mill, two Cochran, Burgoon, Kline and Bechtel, were mixed up in a "serap" outside of the mill after quitting time Friday evening. Professional Tramp.

A professional tramp printer, who has been tramping thirty-nine years, was in town last Thursday and Friday. Twenty years ago he made his first trip to this place, and he has been making annual trips here ever since. The odoriferousness that he carries with him is of the genuine tramp odor. He said he had not been in a bed for a month or more. He was not hankering after work, but had an open hand for any "filthy lucre" that any of the "profess" were willing to contribute to "help him to the next town." While here he slept at hotel de tannery. He says he would not be contented to settle down and remain in one place.

Financial Condition of Jefferson Co.

The County Auditors have about completed their audit of the accounts of the county officials for the year 1898, and their report which will be published next week will be a creditable exhibit of the stewardship of those entrusted with the management of the financial affairs of the county. The amount of county bonds outstanding January 3, 1898, was $69,500; cash in treasury at same time $16,980, and the liabilities of the county over assets $8,000. During the year 1898 county bonds to the amount of $10,800 were redeemed, and the fourth coming statement of the county commissioners will show that on January 2, 1899, the assets of the county over the liability was $13,000, the assets in part being made up of $12,000 in the treasurer's hands, and $25,181 outstanding taxes, a considerable portion of the latter amount having been paid into the county treasury by the collectors since the settlement. This is certainly a gratifying exhibit to place before the taxpayers of the county. It is conclusive evidence that the present board of county commissioners are carefully guarding the people's interests, and that in their efforts in that direction are receiving the assistance and support of the other county officials.—Brookville Republican.

Have You Had It?

The epidemic of grip continues in Reynoldsville and vicinity. In the majority of instances, however, the disease is very mild and even in serious cases an able bodied man is not confined to bed much more than a week.

There are many people suffering from more or less severe colds, who fondly imagine they have the grip, and tell everybody who will listen to their woes that it is so. The grip is a much more severe ailment, even in its mild form, than a cold. When one gets the grip there is no doubt about it.

Vast quantities of quinine are being bought at drug stores as a precautionary measure by those who imagine they are getting the grip.

The peculiarity of the disease is that at first the average man does not give in to it, but continues working, although in a state of semi-collapse. He bears up against it, hoping against hope that he has nothing worse than a cold. Soon he has to go home and as soon as the doctor is called in the victim has to take to bed.

Committee Meeting.

The Executive Committee of the Jefferson County Woman's Christian Temperance Union convened in the parlor of the M. E. church, Reynoldsville, Pa., January 25th, 1899, 2 P. M. The meeting included three sessions, afternoon, evening and forenoon of day following. The two latter sessions being held at the residence of Mrs. S. V. Hays, local president Reynoldsville W. C. T. U. Each session opened with devotional exercise, the remaining time being occupied with business transactions of the organization, review of the different departments and plan of the campaign for the coming months. While we are not nearing the fruition of our labor and our aspirations, we acknowledge no defeat, but with a faith that rises above life's failures, and a courage that sustains in life's conflict, we consecrate anew our energies to the undying principles of the W. C. T. U. and pledge our combined efforts in the peaceful war we wage "For God and Home and Native Land." SECRETARY.

The two school teachers of this place held a picnic social at the grange hall last Wednesday evening, which was a grand success. The funds, $8.50, are to go for a library for the two schools.

Needs Attention.

I wonder if our Board of Health have lost two important senses, sight and smell, when they will allow residents of flats on our Main street to discharge the accumulation from the kitchen sinks down into and upon the floor of the cellar underneath, where no further sewerage or pipes to conduct it away are provided, consequently, it spreads over the floor and what is not absorbed festers and decays, becoming obnoxious and loathsome, breeding disease and causing the dark brooded imps of typhoid fever and diphtheria to hover in the dark corners of such cess pools, to smile and congratulate themselves that a resting place has been found for them. OBSERVER.

Moore's Greeting.

We greet our patrons through this rhyme
And wish them joy through '99.
There are groceries and stores galore,
But none like that of Harry Moore.
Our store is clean, our prices fair;
We treat our patrons "on the square."
Our stock you'll always find complete
And with us none can do or compete.
Our goods are always fresh and rare.
Our prices are beyond compare.
Honesty, policy, full, fair weight,
The cheapest grocery in the State.
You know the place, been there before,
The leader, W. Harry Moore.
Our will is good, our prices just,
We'll hold your patronage or "bust."
Look to your interests, deal with Moore,
Who keeps the leading grocery store.
Our patrons sing "Oh, happy day,"
We now know where to spend our pay.
We've found one spot on this green earth
Where we can get our money's worth.
Hip! hip! hooray, hooray for Moore,
The leader and his grocery store!
And now, as ever heretofore,
Believe me yours,
W. H. Moore,

Marketable Produce.

"The farmers in this neighborhood," remarked a prominent merchant the other day, "have not all learned the importance of sorting their produce and fixing it up nicely for market. Many of them still cling to the idea that potatoes are potatoes and beans are beans and butter is butter, no matter whether small or large, clean or dirty, sweet or strong. It is a big mistake. By putting a few small potatoes in with a wagon load a farmer will have to take five or ten cents a bushel less for the whole lot. By properly sorting them he would have the small potatoes to feed his stock, and would get more money for what he sold. It is the same with everything he has to sell. A few pounds of black beans or a few rotten or bruised apples, detract from the value of the whole lot. And a man who brings bad butter to market once, is always thereafter carefully watched."

"I can tell from the looks of a farmer's team and wagon," continued the merchant, "whether his produce is nice and salable or not. It is the man with the mean looking wagon, boney horses, and dirty harness, who brings the little potatoes, rotten apples and rank butter. When people drive up here with fine, well-fed horses, a nice back or wagon, and offer something for sale, I take it for granted that it is all right, and I'm not mistaken once in a hundred times. The old saying that you can't always judge by appearances, isn't true. You can judge by appearances every time if you understand your business and make a study of those matters.—Mercantile Journal.
