To Keep Violets Fresh.

If one desires to use violets for the toilet, the following way of keeping them fresh has been found excellent: Surround the stems with wadding, after dipping them in salt water, and cover with a layer of tinfoil. If they are used for interior decoration, place the stems in salt water and besprinkle the flowers. At night cover them firmly with tissue paper, and see to it Hood's Sarsaparilla that they are not kept in too warm a place. In this manner they can be kept fresh for several days.

The cups are of the finest The advantage of this novelty is that it can be easily and securely carried by the handles, that it take up little room on a table, and that by simple twist of the handles the server presents the coffee, sugar and milk in the most convenient manner.

How to Glue Purniture.

Certain conditions are necessary for success in gluing:

1. The surfaces to be gined together must be free from old glue, and from any particles of wood, dust, etc., that might tend to keep them apart. 2. The glue must not be too thick, nor spread on too thickly,

3. The two bodies must be fastened together yery firmly until the glue has

Break the glue in small pieces, and cover it well with cold water. Let it soak several hours. Half fill the outer pot with water, and for every pint of water add one tablespoonful of salt; the water boils at a higher temperature when salt is added. Place the inner pot in this, and set over the fire, stirring occasionally. When the glue has melted, thin to the proper consistency with strong vinegar.

AGRICULTURAL TOPICS

It is extremely important that every farmer train himself to handling tools of all kinds. If he has a forge with bellows and a toolhouse with turning lathe he can make extra whiffletrees, clevises and other articles that are apt to break when men and teams are busiest. Many of these can now be bought quite as cheaply as they can be hand made. But there are many things that are exceedingly handy to have about the house or baru that cannot be purchased in the stores. The toolhouse will be one of the favorite places for boys on the farm to be handy with tools, and whatever they do later in life they will never begrudge the time and experience it has taken to give them the lessons thus learned.

Feed Fowls Slowly.

One of the difficulties in winter feeding is that grain is given in a mass, perhaps because the feeder does not care to stand around in the cold, while the fowls are equally in a hurry to fill themselves, so that they may again go on the roost, and cover their chilled feet with their feathers. matter how cold the weather may be fowls on the roost always contrive to keep their feet warm if they get food enough to furnish the internal heat. The natural way for a fowl to take its food is a morsel or a grain at a time, and to get that by scratching for it. This will prevent the food from going in a mass into the crop, and the exercise will keep the fowl's feet warm even in the coldest weather. This is much better than allowing the fowl to fill itself to repletion, and then renain without exercise for hours upon its roost.

To Have Clean Fowls.

For keeping fowls free from lice I have never had occasion to use any of the ordinary applications. The bottom or floor of my poultry house is made of cement upon which was originally placed about an inch of sawdust. The droppings were allowed to remain and accumulate and from time to time the surplus above an inch or two in depth was removed, but for some twenty years was never until this spring completely cleared out. The constant scratching of the fowls has kept the floor covered from two to four inches deep with a very dry, dusty and fine layer in which the fowls delight to dust themselves in all weathers. As a result I scarcely ever see a louse of any kind, and if a lonsy fowl is introduced from abroad it is very soon relieved from the vermin. The house opens into my boiler house and is thus kept at a moderate temperature during the winter and the fowls can be seen dusting themselves nearly every day at all seasons. No sawdust or other material has been added from the beginning until this season, when the floor was entirely seen for the first time in many years and sawdust again used as s starter. —Dr. Jabez Fisher, in Orange Judd Farmer.

Drainage From Barnyards.

It is very important that the barneard should be kept dry stall seasons. To this end all the matter from build-ings enclosing it should be diverted to the outside of the barnyard, and if this is on an elevation it is easy to make a drain that will safely carry it On no account should a drain be dug through the barnyard itself. We have seen some of these barnyard drains, and without exception they filled after a few years with a fungous growth which entirely choked the ried off so that only the rains and nows that fall in the barnyard are to be removed, there will rarely, if ever, be more water fall that the manure ill need to keep it in good condition. Most of the complaints about manure being washed away are due to leaving it under the eaves of barns where all the water that falls on the roof is poured into it. The inside of the barnyard should have a slight descent toward the middle, and there most of the manure should be thrown as it accumulates in the stable. If stock is allowed to run over these manure piles in the daytime the manure will not heat much in cold weather, and will need piling up towards spring to fit it for applying to crops.

Stabling Calves.

Should calves be confined in the same common stable apartment with milch cows? From my experience, I certainly say no. To begin with, the more animals that are crowded together in one apartment the more difticult becomes sufficient ventilation. with consequent vitiation of air. Under such circumstances the weaker animals (caives) suffer at the expense of the stronger ones (cows).

I have heard some dairymen argue that the increased warmth of the cow stable caused by the crowding of so many animals into it was in favor of its habitation by calves. If warmth, without regard to good air, was all we were after, that might be an argument, but as it is most cow stables at the best are provided only with sufficient ventilation for the cows they shelter, with no adequate provision for extra animals. Then, again, where cows and calves are in a common stable and are turned out together, the former always bully over the latter, sometimes to the extent of positive physical injury,
Another thing, I think that calves are a source of annoyance to cows in the stable, anyway. Anything that works detrimentally on the nervous system of a milch cow is antagonistic to a normal secretion of milk. need quiet and tranquil surroundings, which can best be secured by their living positively alone. The tender young calves, six months of age or more, can be kept warm apart from the cows if their owners wish them to be so kept.—George E. Newell, in Massachusetts Ploughman.

The Little Valve Which Has for Hundreds of Years Prevented the Cure of Diseases in the Air Passages.

Physicians Witness the Death of Thousands Annually, Unable to Reach the Diseased Parts on Account of This Obstacle Created by Nature to Protect the Bron-

It is now acknowledged by all medical men that this little valve, called the epiglotis, has effectively prevented the cure of Consumption and all-deep-scated diseases of the respiratory organs for hundreds of years. It is due to its prevence at the entrance of the windpipe that all liquid medicines, no matter in what form they are administered or how minutely divided by sprays or atomizers, are prevented from entering the bronchial tubes or lungs; yet, if it were not for this little valve, liquids and food would enter these passages and cause instant straingulation and death. The epiglottis is always open to permit the passage of air to the lungs, but so constructed that the slightest contraction of the threat enuses it to close over the opening to the windpipe, and prevent the least drop of moisture from entering the passages which lead to the lungs. Try to breathe and swallow at the same time and you will see how perfectly this little valve does its work. Is it any wonder, then, that the number of persons afflicted with Catarra. Bronchitis and Consumption have steadily increased every year, and that the medical profession should have become excited over the discovery of a dry air germicide, the first ever found, that can be carried to all parts of the head, throat, and lungs in the air you breathe? No other treatment or medicine has ever created such a prefound interest among the doctors, and this interest is being increased hourly by the wonderful recoveries made under their own eyes. Not alone among the medical profession has this been felt, but hundreds of thousands of men and women throughout the United States, through free treatments given, and influenced by the knowledge that their money would be returned in case of failure, have tested this new remedy, been cured, and are to-day recommending "HYOME!" to all their friends and acquaintances.
