striped French percale is the material selected, a regulation collar of white linen being worn, with a string tie of pink satin. The white leather belt is closed with old silver clasps. A new feature in connection with this style of waist is the gathers that collect at the shoulder edges each side of the stiff bosom. The bosom, which has ton, is applied over the fronts and waist.

New York Cirr (Special).—For those who favor mannish effects in dress this smart shirt waist has un-buttons and loops, as shown, or with buttons and buttonholes, if so pre-ferred. The centre back gore is gathered closely at the top, the fulness being invisible under the deeply laid pleats that meet closely in back. This arrangement gives necessary saddle room when mounted, and a becoming flare when off the wheel. A deep un-derfacing of the material, held in place with rows of stitching about an inch apart, finishes the lower edge of the A smooth interlining of haircloth is recommended to insure both safety and style.

Old Irish War Cries

Like the modern cowboy yell of the western troops in the Cuban campaign, the war cries and slogans of the ancient Irish clans often had much effect in inspiring fear in the enemy and courage and enthusiasm in the command. The simplest and most frequent of old Erin's war cries was Faire, faire," signifying "watch," or "look out." It was precautionary signal and was commonly written "Farrah." From it the modern "hurrah" is supposed to have been derived. Another ery was "A bualdh," which meant "to the victory." It was pro-nounced "aboo," and followed the name of the clan, or leader, according to circumstances, like "O'Neill aboo," "Clann Conail aboo," Frequently "a buaidh" is construed incorrectly in modern English to mean "forever, That translation applies to "go brath," but not "a bualdh," The famous Irish ery of "Fag an bealach," meaning "clear the way," scared the spunk out of the French soldiery in the Peninsular war.

Magnetism in Bricks.

From time to time experts have noticed certain unexplainable peculiarities in magnetic instruments in various buildings. It is now declared, as the result of experiments and investigations, that the vagaries are due to the presence of magnetism in bricks. They are made of earthy matter containing a greater or less proportion of magnetite, or magnetic iron ore.

VIRTUE IN IVY LEAVES. Used for Making Old Gowns New

A woman in England has recently discovered the peculiar virtues of the ivy leaf as a means of bringing up pristine freshness to a soiled, faded or spotted gown. This is her recipe: Pick about twenty ivy leaves, young, green ones by choice, wash them carefully and place them in a jug or basin Add about one pint of boiling water, cover up the basin or jug, and leave all to soak for two or three hours, when the cleanser will be ready for use. Meanwhile the garment must be thoroughly brushed inside and out, and all untidy braid or lining removed from the bottom. When ready, spread it on the table and carefully sponge it with the tvy water. It must then be wrung out dry, when it will be found to have recovered its former color and to look quite like new. Black silk may be cleaned in the same manner, but it needs more care. If the silk is in the breadths it must be lightly sponged and then tightly rolled over a cloth wound round a roller and left to dry. Black lace may also be renovated when solled or brown with age by sponging

Not Meant for Him.
The public is invited to sympathize with a quiet and retiring citizen of New York who, says the Sun, occupled a seat near the door of a crowded cable car when a masterful stout woman entered. Having no newspaper behind which to hide, he was fixed and subjugated by the glittering eye. He rose and offered his place to her. Senting herself-without thanking him-she exclaimed in strident tones that reached to the farthest end of the car: "Say, what do you want to stand up there for? Come here and sit on my lap." "Madam." gasped the man, as his face became scarlet, "I—I fear I'm not deserving of such an honor. What do you mean, you dude?" shrieked the woman, "You know very well I was speaking to my little niece behind
