Storm Does Considerable Damage—Snake in the Cellar—Personals.

L. Bussard, of Akron, Ohio, uncle of our townsman, E. Bussard, and Mrs. Joseph Stormer, spent several weeks in this place, returning last Thursday. Mr. Bussard owns a very good farm at that place and as he is left without any one to take care of him has offered the large farm to either of the above for his keeping. Mr. Stormer is at Akron this week investigating matters and will probably accept the offer.

The electric storm which passed over this place last Friday afternoon was the severest ever witnessed in the community. The long continued thunder and lightning lasted for several hours, doing a great deal of damage. The house of Noif was struck, shattering the chimney, and a cow belonging to Paul Mowrey was struck and killed. Mrs. Bert Emery had a hair-raising experience one day last week. On going to the cellar for milk she found a large house snake curled around a milk crock. Mrs. Emery hurried to get some one to kill the serpent, but before she returned it took its departure.

The sage of the Punxsutawney Spirit says: "Love of the beautiful is perhaps the strongest incentive to individual exertion. The youth dreams of a beautiful wife, and strives to make a demand for himself in beauty's circles by securing fame and fortune. After that he wants a beautiful home, with beautiful pictures on the walls, and labors with incessant zeal to gratify his aesthetic tastes. The necessities of life do not even satisfy the lowest savage, as is seen by the fact that they are exceedingly fond of gaudy trinkets and grotesque ornaments. There is a whole creed in the love of the beautiful, for it includes beauty of form, color, morals, sentiment and sound.

It is human to always be looking for something for nothing. Almost anything that is free will attract a crowd, at least while there is novelty in it.—Marienville Express. Right you are brother. Some people will even borrow their neighbor's paper.
