Opera House Friday Night.

"The Prodigal Father," with Lynn Welcher, one of the most successful farce comedies ever written, continues its hold on popular favor. Freedom from vulgarity, genuinely novel specialties, a decidedly well balanced presenting company, and a clean cut, refreshing, breezy performance are the principal elements in the make up of "The Prodigal Father," which will be seen at Reynolds opera house Friday, Nov. 17, for one night only, that render the attraction deserving of hearty praise and should result in heavy attendance during the engagement. Like nearly all offerings of its class, "The Prodigal Father" simply serves as a theme for numerous specialties, but unlike many of these diversions, is immensely funny. From the rise of the curtain only a confirmed hypochondriac could resist the infectious drollery of the clever people on the stage. The entire production rises far above the average farcical offering. Tickets on sale at Stoke's drug store.

Pennsylvania Day.

Governor Stone having designated Thursday, November 16, as Pennsylvania Day at the National Export Exposition, Philadelphia, and the same having been set apart by the managers, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets on November 15 from all points on its line in Pennsylvania west of Harrisburg and west and north of Sunbury, to Philadelphia and return, at rate of one cent per mile in each direction, plus admission to the Exposition. Tickets will be good to return until November 17, inclusive. Gov. Stone and State officials will attend.

THE NEW YEAR.

The year eighteen hundred and ninety-nine is rapidly drawing to a close and with it the second half of the nineteenth century. And who can foretell the events that may happen before its close?

The last fifty years have been most eventful, the last five years have added greatly to the making of the history of our and other countries, and even the last year has been one in which the devices of human ingenuity and the results of human skill and industry have been invested with splendor, never before witnessed; and the peaceful gathering of admiring multitudes probably intermingled with those of all nations, have added no little effect and attractiveness to the year's gorgeous display. But the next fifty years may throw the last into the shade by revolutions still more surprising, and a still greater solemn exhibition of the truth, that the Most High ruleth among the children of men. Whatever trouble may be at hand, and whatever storms may threaten us, our duty is to look up, and lift up our hearts, because our redemption draweth nigh. Already the signs of great events are around us, and we with brightened hope glance with imaginative eye through the long vista of coming years; and mind's eye weaves bright garlands for us, laurels for our nation and every effort and event crowned with success.

Our eyes have been turned upon the success of the past year and we may have been tempted to think too much of man and nation and far too little of Him who has a hand in the affairs of men and nations—too much of the brief and fleeting span of our existence here, and too little of the immeasurable eternity beyond. But most seasonably as this year closes, we may turn our minds inward at the vivid realization, not boasting of the successes or the failures of the past, but wisely improving our present time, we can go forth to meet the year nineteen hundred with a noble heart and a smile of welcome. For the new year calls us forth to new zeal in life, new devotedness to God, home and nation, and a more earnest resistance to every corruption of truth.

Sweet New Year! many a thought is wedded unto thee;
Nor shall they fall, till, at thy close,
Life's golden fruit is shed.
MISTLETOE.

We who have served in the capacity of editors for the past month cease to be supervisors of the same with this issue. We heartily thank those who co-operated with us in making our work easy. Hoping that we never will be elected in this capacity again we give, and without reluctance, our positions to the more worthy.

Bing & Co.

Say! We had a barrel of fun out of our wall paper sale, but it is all over now. A man down in Clarion county that had borrowed a copy of The Star from a non-subscriber, saw the "ad," came up with a two horse wagon, purchased all that was left, and went away happy. A woman up on the hill wouldn't believe it, was disappointed when she found it was so, but went away smiling after buying a paper worth 20 cents for one-half the price.

New lot of low-priced papers just in.
