The threatening clouds that have been darkening the horizon in the far off lands of Stanley's travels, have at last broken, and the closing months of the nineteenth century present a mournful spectacle to the apostles of social progress.

Now that Congress is in session, the Post may be expected to give the most complete and interesting reports from the National Capitol. Already the events are shaping themselves for the presidential campaign of 1900, and the Post is planning to duplicate and then excel its wonderful record of 1896.

E. elected the following officers at a recent meeting: President, May Johnston; vice-president, Blanche Stewart; recording secretary, Martha Snodden; corresponding secretary, Roxie Brison; treasurer, Alice Beveridge; organist, May Johnston; assistant organists, Roxie Brison and Lena Smith.

E. R. Syphrit, who has been working at Panle the past few months, returned home last week on the sick list. Henry Roush, of West Reynoldsville, visited his uncle, Peter Wells, at this place last Sunday.

Albert Strouse spent several days last week in Lock Haven. Last Thursday evening Paradise council No. 257, O. U. A. M., elected their officers for the ensuing term.

The Best of Reading for Old and Young.

Few newspapers in the country have better news facilities than the Pittsburgh Post. A glance at its columns day by day will convince even the most casual reader that this is a fact.

The great success of the Post in reporting the Spanish-American war is being continued now that the war has been carried into Africa. The Post's dispatches from London and the seat of war are unequalled.
