Don't All Think Alike.

During a political campaign some years ago Hon. James G. Blaine, the great statesman, was making a speech before a large audience in a town in Maine when an old gentleman, who had staine when an old gentleman, who had often said, "the folks o' this state are a pack o' fools," because they didn't believe as he did, interrupted Mr. Blaine twice during the speech. The second time some of the rougher element of the audience were determined to eject the interrupter. the interrupter, but the 'I Knight' stopped them and said: man is an American citizen. He has just as good right to his opinion as you r I. Never molest a man because he oes not think as we do." Occasionally we find men who are vindictive, and would even shut off the bread and butter from a fellow—if they could—who does not think as they do, or does not do the things they think he ought to do. We should remember that every American citizen has a right to his opinion and that men do not always see things alike, and that the other fellow may be just as honest in his views as we are. It is foolishness for men to become enemies because one don't do what the other thinks he ought to do. No man in this free land should attempt to throttle freedom of opinion and try to compel others to thinks as he does.
