The first half of the school term has now ended and we have but one more time to assemble in the 19th century. Already the darkened horizon is being illuminated with the shining light of the new year, and the trials and troubles of the past three months are forgotten in the delightful memories which cluster around its coming. With this season are associated all those nobler feelings that tend to infuse us with a spirit of charity. The time never comes when the season of Christmas cannot be enjoyed. While personal misfortune may indeed cloud the festivities on a certain year, yet one of those great lessons of life, taught by the hard arm of experience and which we all have to learn, is that there must be shadows as well as light. But Christmas will dawn again and the sorrows of the past will be forgotten in the ecstasies of the future.

It is the birthday of hope and should be for every one. The "bright day drawn from the darkened night."

As the meeting last Friday was the last held by the Literary Society in the 19th century, it was proper that the program prepared for that day should be one fitting to the occasion. The young ladies, recognizing that fact, put forth extra efforts in the preparation of their convention and the result was their work was crowned with success. The convention was a typical spinster affair, and abounded in amusing and ludicrous incidents. The members were clad in that style of garments which captivated the hearts of our revolutionary forefathers, and their chief aim appeared to be a desire to impress upon the dignified bachelors, who were present in full force, that the members of the gentler sex were much wronged. Their parts were well prepared, as were their faces, and taking all in all the convention was a complete success, and the young ladies are to be congratulated.

At the last meeting of the Shakespearean Literary Society the following officers were elected to serve the ensuing month: President, James Muir; vice president, Viola McGaw; secretary, Iva Bower; program committee, Tom Nolan, Fred Smith and Maud Hoon; critics, Professor Leavenworth and Ellic Millirent; editor-in-chief, Clement Flynn; assistant editor, Jay McGaw; local editor, Christine Brown.

The Lilliputian Carnival was a complete success and while it did not receive the attention it merited, yet fair sized audiences were present.

The Irl R. Hicks 1901 Almanac.

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R. Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warnings of every great storm, flood, cold wave and drouth, have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 Almanac, by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published, is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engravings, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof. Hicks' journal, Word and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company, 2201 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.
