WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1901.

An independent local paper, published every Wednesday at Reynoldsville, Jefferson Co., Pa., devoted to the interests of Reynoldsville and Jefferson county. Non-political, will treat all with fairness, and will be especially friendly towards the laboring class.

Communications intended for publication must be accompanied by the writer's name, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith. Interesting news items solicited. Advertising rates made known on application at this office.

Lengthy communications and change of advertisements should reach this office by Monday noon.

Subscription price $1.00 per year, in advance. Address all communications to C. A. Stephenson, Reynoldsville, Pa.
Entered at the postoffice at Reynoldsville, Pa., as second class mail matter.

Are you buying your goods in Reynoldsville, and thus doing your part to keep up the business interests of the town where you secure a livelihood? Or do you go or send out of town to buy what you want, putting your money in circulation in some other town or city, to the detriment of the town in which you live? There never was a time in the history of Reynoldsville when the town had as many and as fine stores as we now have in all lines of business; and there never was a time when competition was as close among our business men as it is now, thus giving the customers the advantage of buying goods of all kind at reasonable prices, in fact as cheap as it is possible for merchants of other towns to sell the same grade of goods for. Perhaps the merchants of other towns or cities will offer a special price on one article, but they will make up for it on something else. The fact of the matter is that too many of our people have gotten into the habit of buying goods in other places and persist in continuing to do so. Even some people in business will patronize outsiders in preference to patronizing and encouraging merchants of their own town. The man who gets his living in a town and buys what he wants some other place, is not concerned about the interests of the town where he resides, even though he proclaims from the house top that he is. It might be surprising if a list of the names of people who do just such things were published. The best way to kill any business is not to patronize it. If a town would have first-class business houses the people of the town must encourage them in a substantial way.

We talk about getting additional industries to increase the business of our town, and we need all the new industries we can get, but if the people of our town would all buy everything they need—dry goods, furniture, hardware, wagons, and other things—at Reynoldsville for one year, they will find that it will be worth as much to the town's business interests as a large industry. Then why not be wise and help ourselves by buying from our own merchants? If you want to have the best town in this section, then buy at home. What would the town amount to if we had no business places in it? People would surely tumble over one another trying to move out of the town. Then if we expect men to give us good business places why not give them the proper encouragement. If money is to be raised for any purpose the merchants are generally the first persons to whom the subscription paper is presented, and in some cases by people who buy goods out of town.

When the devil rebelled against the power of his Lord and fell from high heaven to hell, he is described by Milton as taking his revenge by introducing the thought of sin into the mind of Eve by the subtle workings of a dream. Through the dream came all the misery sin entails upon the world. And the mind of man is still dreaming, only now we dream in our waking moments. In our day dreams we rise to heights divine, we are great, we are rich, we have all we want and do as we wish. It is pleasant to dream. But woe to the man who allows himself to think he can really do all he dreams he can. Many a man has ended his life having done nothing in all the world, who in his dreams conquered the world. It is not by fancy that success comes. Dream of success if you will, but get to work when you wish to achieve it.

THE SOZONIAN CASKET CASE.

THE MAIN POINTS OF SUPERIORITY.

It is absolutely impregnable and indestructible. It defies decay and destruction. It positively arrests the action of the elements. It is emphatically air tight and water proof. It will resist and withstand any weight. It weighs little more than a wooden box. It positively insures the dry decay of the corpse. It preserves and protects the casket and corpse for an indefinite period. It will last not for years, but for centuries. It is admirably adapted for shipping purposes. It is universally admitted to be the most sanitary Case ever made.
