

The present indications are that there will be Republican candidates galore next spring for the various county offices to be filled, excepting the office of prothonotary, and it is not at all likely that Cyrus H. Blood, the present incumbent, will have any opposition for the nomination for a second term. Mr. Blood pays strict attention to business and has proven himself to be so competent and accommodating during his present term that it would be a waste of time and money for any other Republican to be a candidate for prothonotary in 1902, and we believe this fact is so well known that no Republican matters not how anxious he may be to run for the nomination, will announce himself against Mr. Blood, for he certainly has the lead for next time.

Old fogysm has a pretty strong grip on us, perhaps for evil, perhaps for good, and does not seem to mind much the ravings of countless magazines and journals devoted to protest against the ways of this staid old world. But fogysm drives men mad sometimes and the madness appears in the nonsensical names and mottoes adopted by the reform magazines. Out in Colorado a brilliant hued journal is issued announcing itself as a "pungent periodical of pessimistic propensities published on principle in the interest of the perverted and the pious, the pauper and the prince." Another calls itself "a journal of protest," and devotes page after page to mere fault finding with no other aim than to find fault, and as it is all written by one man, one is inclined to remark that "he doth protest too much." This journal assures the public that it is a "mole-blind, stupid thing, right only in its instincts," and some 98,000 people seem to approve this sentiment by subscribing for it. Which seems to show that the profession of protesting is a paying one.

The people, some of them at least, like to be humbugged, even as Showman Barnum used to observe. From time to time advertisements appear in the papers of "Absent Treatment Cures" wherein some enterprising individual does solemnly agree to cure all mortal ailments from ingrown toenails to leprosy simply through the agency of his most magnetic mind—not neglecting to mention that payment must be made in advance. That the advertisements should appear is not strange, for 'tis a habit of men towards men to hoodwink them when they can. But that these impostors should find victims so numerous is passing strange. One of these healers exhibits sworn testimonials to the effect that "by earnest thought the healer had caused a third set of teeth to grow in his patient." Another avers that after sixteen days of the healer's mind treatment, hair had grown on a bald head of twenty-seven years standing. Fortunately for the people—the unimaginative ones—Uncle Sam is conservative to the very core and, failing to see the reasonableness of this modern method of healing, bluntly calls it a fake and denies the use of the mails to such as are detected.

This is a very practical age in which it is taken for granted that all men are born free and unequal, but it is hard to understand why the English nation, noted ever for its sound, shrewd views of life, should persist in allowing their ancestors to think for them in one particular—the veneration paid to one who happens to be born in the family of an aristocrat. There was a time when war was the business of mankind—when the lords of England had a mission in the world, when veneration for them was as reasonable as it was prudent—but that was all long ago. The Duke of York, heir to the throne, has just completed a trip around the world, and wherever he stopped, his trip was a continual ovation. Yet what has he ever done to merit the applause of the world? He happened to be born in the family of a noble, and the English nation takes it for granted that the child of a lord has by birth all those accomplishments which others can obtain only by constant endeavor and study. It is nonsense, but the delusion is complete, and the aristocracy, absolutely useless now, thrives on the taxes of the masses of the nation. Some day the people will awaken and when they do, the streets of England will run with blood even as the streets of France did in the demon dance of a hundred years ago, when poverty, rags and common sense clinched in death struggle with a useless aristocracy snapping the life of the nation.

Grand Opening from 3 to 8 p. m. MILLIRENS Grand Opening from 3 to 8 p. m.
GRAND OPENING DAY
THURSDAY, NOV. 21, '01.

On that day we shall throw open our doors to the appreciative public. Every man, woman and child will be welcomed into our new department store. We shall use every effort to make this opening one to be remembered by all. We want the crowds to swell our aisles so that every available space will be taken.

Our store on that day will be what we aim to make it in the future, viz: one of the most up-to-date and progressive stores in Pennsylvania. So while you are listening to sweet strains of music furnished by one of the finest orchestras in the country, you can pass from counter to counter and feast your eyes on such innumerable novelties as you have failed to see before. Think of the store! Every dollar's worth of goods new, no old styles in anything to worry about and a grand selection to pick from. So let us urge you to put everything aside. Your day's work at the house will not be lost, it will be your gain to attend our grand opening next Thursday.

Remember the date, THURSDAY, NOV. 21, from 3 to 8 p. m.
