Life and Scenes in Colorado.

DENVER, COL., May 10, 1902. Mr. Editor—We herewith submit a letter which may be of interest to those who have never crossed the Great American Desert, or breathed the fresh, pure air of this altitude.

Leaving Columbus, Ohio, May 4th, at 2.30 p. m. we reached Cincinnati at 5.45 in the evening. After washing the coal dirt and cinders from our eyes and partaking of a hearty supper of plum biscuits and sordum molasses, we resumed our journey westward during the night for St. Louis, which point we reached about 8.00 of the second day.

The first 100 miles was in a northerly direction along the banks of the Mississippi river to the city of Hannibal. This portion of the trip presented some very beautiful, as well as interesting sights.

Leaving the river at this point our course turned westward through the northern part of Mo. and southern part of Neb. We were unfortunately here, being compelled to pass through the most interesting part of this great farming country at night, yet we saw enough of it to make a Pennsylvania farmer sorry he had ever cast his lot among the hills and rocks of the old Keystone State.

Notwithstanding this fact, the Pennsylvania farmer has advantages and resources in other things, that as far exceed those of this country as do her agriculture advantages exceed ours.

The trip across the plains however is one devoid of interest until you are within about 72 miles of Denver, for it is there you first get sight of the back-bone of the U. S. Treasury, "The Rocky Mountains."

This is a sight when once seen can never be forgotten. Beautiful beyond description: for as the eye follows those snow capped peaks for a distance of 220 miles, (for this much of the range can be seen from one point) as they rear their lofty heads high into the heavens, it seems as if they formed a connecting link between heaven and earth.

This, however, is only one of the many beautiful sights to be seen, and one can get but a faint idea of the real grandeur from this description.

We arrived in Denver Wednesday at 3:15 p. m. and during our short stay have found it to be a modern city in every way.

Denver has been called "The Queen City of the Plains," but were I to name it I should call it "The Skin City of the West," for the people here will skin you proper if they get a chance. The nearest I came getting skinned was when I had my first shave.

Went into a barber shop, had a very ordinary shave, and after the barber had finished shaving me he began rubbing my head, and asked, "wet or dry?" I said, "wet," for I was very dry, and after he had used a little Rocky Mountain water, which is snow water, of course I handed him a quarter, for which he thanked me kindly and rang up 25c on the register.

Stepping outside I stood for a moment hesitating when my attention was attracted by a hand coming down street, playing with more than ordinary feeling, "When a Ruben comes to Town." It is not necessary for me to say that I was soon in my room at the hotel. Now this was my first experience. We stay possible have more during our stay here.

The Buffalo people want Congress to appropriate $1,000,000 towards paying the Pan-American Exposition indebtedness. They claim the tragic death of President McKinley was the cause of the receipts of the Exposition not meeting the expenses of Exposition.

CLASS POEM. Of the first of all the classes A description he will make, So listen to the mumbing masses What fortune pleasure he will take.

Christine, she's the first, Yes she's the first one in the line, She has golden hair, Her face is fair, And a look which is sublime.

Then Veril next, Without one pretext, She herself upon the box, She's neat and sweet, And looks complete, But look at those scarlet locks.

Now up steps Katie King and asks That her pretty pliz Might be taken too, Which is very nice If you please.

But be careful or she'll sneeze you. Now on the run came Katie Kerr To see the zoo she said, But alas her hurry and flurry She forgot to switch and braid.

Now Ethelyn with the grace of a Queen Steps stately on the box, But low to me, if you could see She's a real beauty.

Then unstopped little Grace While her heart went bumpity bump, She wanted a picture of her face But the box crashed with a thump.

Then Fred says her: Duck let us have ours together. Alright, says I, if the girls don't care, But maybe we hadn't better, But nevertheless at the birds we looked: Could you imagine what happened? But the glass broke and we were left to heat.

Without our pliz being taken. But take the classes as a whole We were always happy, joyous and gay: Always thinking of that bright day, Which would wipe all cares away. So our hearts are as light as a songster's bird.

They passed us all without a word. But listen to the juniors mournful cry: "O! Seniors, bright laughing seniors, We'll be weary, we'll be dreary And its O! O! O!"

No little juniors will have to let you stay. Be happy little juniors and let your hearts be gay. For this world is but a bubble, And there's nothing but trouble, There's hardships, toil and woe, No matter where you go.

Go where you will, go where you may, You are never free from care. For at the best this world of ours Is but a castle in the air.

But juniors when you are silent in regret, Will you your happy hours forget? When far away we roam From our present homes: When you are lone and sad: When in pleasure glad With your fond hearts turn to us? Will you forget us then? —Ira Bowen.

TO JUNIORS OF '02. Dear Juniors:—As we are about to depart from your enjoyable company we feel as if we ought to give you a few words of advice, as we see how very necessary our kind care and protection has been to you.

We have noticed that during your study periods your minds have been wandering far, far away in beautiful recollections of the past and future. During the wanderings of your eyes when you would look over and see how very diligently we were studying, we would notice a deep flush shadowing your countenance and immediately you would turn to those books which will lead you to a higher and better life.

We have heard that some of the members of the class are troubled with insomnia. Ah! this is too bad to think that you are wasting your golden moments in such a fruitless manner. Take the advice of Pope, Oh! Juniors, "Beware of all but most beware of man."

We have finished our course, Oh Juniors! but Oh! what labor has been exerted upon it, and if you do not devote yourselves more earnestly to your studies you will have to solve the great question, "to be or not to be a Senior."

Our school days now are ended, We have trodden life's happy path, And this we've carefully wended, This course to pursue to the last. Our first step now we are taking From our present school path, Let us aim in the course we are taking For a happier meeting at last. Our pleasures are left in the shadows, As our school days sun is setting, We shall endeavor to brighten life's sunset hours By memories of by-gone teachings.

Farewell to all school pleasures, Farewell to student's dear, Farewell to earnest teachers 'Tis the close of our Senior year. Reveals a Great Secret. It is often asked how such startling cures, that puzzle the best physicians, are effected by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Dear Sir: Catch words and phrases may look well in advertisements, but they do you no good. Don't help your paint to wear. L. & M. has more lead and zinc in it than any other paints, but its great feature is that you add much oil to it. Don't pay a paint price for lined oil when you can buy L. & M. semi-paste, and then add the oil which you have paid the proper price. Ask Reynoldsville Hardware Co. for full color cards and combination booklets. Respectfully Yours, LONGMAN & MARTINEZ, Paint Makers.
