NUMBER 18.

Natural History.

One feature of a circus that is given least consideration and which is entitled to more than a passing notice, is the educational value thereof besides its glorious amusing features. A child is sent to school, and the average youth or youngster finds as most interesting the study of natural history. It dotes on the savage lion, it is amused by the "happy family" of monkeys, it marvels at the elephants and worries over the only "Philippino" bull and the rare lion slayers, black tigers, leopards, hyenas, bears and animals of all descriptions. A teacher will vouch for the statement that one object lesson is worth a hundred book lessons. The big menagerie of the Walter L. Main Shows affords the only possible opportunity to study in life the animals whose pictures they are wont to see in their school books. Consequently the great educational value of this traveling institution which will be seen in Brookville on Friday, Sept. 12th, 1902. The Great Walter L. Main Colossal Three-Ring Circus and Mammoth Menagerie will give to performances, at 2 and 8 p. m. Doors open an hour earlier; seating capacity 10,000; 25 uniformed ushers. The biggest and absolutely the most perfect water and sun proof tents in the world.

Chasing Shadows.

One morning last week a young bird dog created some amusement near Hotel Belnap by chasing bird shadows. A dozen or more sparrows were flying around a tree in front of Centennial hall and the dog chased their shadows on the ground as they flew from one branch to another or flew away. A sparrow alighted on a telephone wire, making a perfect shadow on ground, and the dog jumped on shadow with both front feet and began scratching the ground, but the bird was not there. If a bird flew away the dog would chase the shadow as long as it was visible, but paid no attention to the bird itself. It looked foolish to see a bird dog chase a little shadow, but how much more foolish it is to see men and women—young and old—chasing the shadows in life and ignoring the real things. Are you chasing shadows?
