VOLUME 11.

REYNOLDSVILLE, PENN'A., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1902.

NUMBER 19.

The Order of Elks.

The Order of Elks is a child of America, and one of its noblest offsprings. It could not have been devised by the mind of man under any other conditions than those that exist in our free country and under our free institutions. It has no ranks and titles; it is no respecter of persons. All Elks are equal, differing only as one may excel another in loving the good and beautiful and in performing noble deeds in silence and without parade. Its primary objects is to succor those in sickness and distress and to help the weak and unfortunate and cheer the despondent.

Following modest in the train of this grand purpose are other aims that aid in its fulfillment by teaching men how to live, by frequent intercourse under proper restraint, that curb selfishness and excess, and which tell man how to enjoy the good things of life without abuse. The founders of the order had no conception of the scope and possibilities of the present organization. They never dreamed of its greatness, but they are entitled to and deserving of every credit for sowing the seeds that have produced such magnificent and gratifying results. They "built wiser than they knew."

The first lodge of Elks was organized on May 21, 1868, on the second floor of a two-story frame building, at No. 29 Delancy street, New York city. It was composed only of a few gentlemen of the theatrical profession, drawn together for social intercourse. It has now developed into a wide spread and powerful order of benevolence and charity, with lodges in over 300 of the principal cities of the Union.

The Order of Elks has won for itself a place among the fraternities of America which is entirely unique and distinctive. It is rich in good works, neglecting not its living members while caring for its dead, and its growth has been and will be steady and solid. Its popularity is becoming more and more pronounced and it bids fair to become in time one of the very largest, as it is now one of the greatest, fraternal organizations in the world.—Pennsylvania Grrt.

Death of L. R. Erdice.
L. R. Erdice, among the best known men in Brookville, died at his home in South Brookville at 20 minutes after 2 o'clock on Wednesday morning of this week, September 10th, 1902, after a short serious illness. The cause of his death was heart difficulty, probably caused by a fall from an oil derrick in Butler county, three years ago, or more. Since that time he has been failing physically, the failure being rapid during the past year. For only about six weeks, however, was he confined to his room.
Deceased was a good mechanic, a man of good character, strictly honest, faithful in the discharge of every obligation and duty he undertook, and loyal to his friends under all circumstances.—Brookville Democrat.
Mr. Erdice was 54 years old. He was postmaster at Brookville one term. In 1887 he was married to Miss Mary Verbeck, of Brookville. Mr. and Mrs. Erdice are both well known in Reynoldsville. She has been giving music lessons in this place several years, and Mr. Erdice was here frequently the past year taking orders and delivering groceries.
