RHINOCEROS' HUNTING.

The Killing of a Big Rhino on the was dashing along, confident that the rhino must be far ahead, when Zowanji whistled. I could see nothing till he pointed out the brute lying quite close to me. The sun beating on her mud caked hide made at blend so perfeetly with the red earth and yellowish grass that I should have walked right up without seeing her. She sprang to her feet. We both fired. She made a short dash toward us, but thought better of it and rushed down a small slope on to a flat bed of short reeds. Here she turned again and defled us. Again the heavy guns roared. She spun round and round several times, staggered, re-covered and dashed off only to stop, however, under the next tree. The .303s cracked, and in a wild chorus of thankful yells she toppled over, rose again, spun round and finally subsided into the grass. We went up quite close to finish her. She fought hard to rise and have a last charge, but the little pencillike bullet again sped on its sad errand, and the game old relie of prehistoric times breathed her last. We were sad men as we gazed upon her grotesque, misshapen form. Somehow one feels such a blatant upstart in the presence of the pachyderms when one thinks of the unbroken line that dates back unchanged into the unthinkable ages of the past.-Ewart Grogan in Outing.

The Hendsman's Perquisites.

Strange and unreasonable laws guaranteed to the headsman his full share of emoluments. He was well paid for his work and never suffered from a dull season. From the towns he received poultry and fodder, from the monasteries fish and game. The Abbaye de Saint-Germain gave him every year a pig's head; the Abbaye de Saint-Martin five loaves of bread and five bot ties of wine. Cakes were baked for him on the eve of Epiphany. For each leper in the community he exacted-heaven knows why-a tax at Christmas time. Les filles de joie were his vassals. It was his privilege to selze in the market place as much corn as he could carry away in his hands, and the peasants thus freely robbed submitted without a murmur, crossing themselves with fervor as he passed. He had the power to save from death any woman on her way to the scaffold, provided he were able and willing to marry her. He was the first official called to the body of a suicide, and, standing on the dead man's breast, he claimed as his own everything he could touch with the point of his long sword.-Agnes Repplier in Harper's Magazine.

with the gathering of it. One morning after the siege of Paris, when the city was believed in London to be still in the hands of the commune, Sir John Robinson, manager of the Daily News of London, reached his office to find the late Archibald Forbes lying on the floor asleep, his head on a postoffice directory, while the printers were hard at work on his manuscript, the story of "Paris In Flames," a most vivid description of the last days of the commune.

"Forbes had telegraphed from Dover announcing his coming," said Sir John In, present a startling appearance to the novice. It is one of the impossible Robinson, "the printers had been waiting, and thus the country heard of those terrible days for the first time.

"London was ablaze with excite ment. Bouverie street was impassable through the newsboys shricking for copies, and in parliament Mr. Gladstone was questioned that afternoon and could only say he hoped the story was exaggerated.

"When Forbes wakened from his slumber amid all this turmoil, what a spectacle he was! His face was black with powder, his eyes red and in flamed, his clothes matted with clay and dust; he was a dreadful picture. He had been compelled to assist the communists in defending a triangular space upon which three detachments of the Versailles troops were firing, and had actually taught the citizens how to build a barricade."

By aid of dummy dispatches addressed to Lord Granville and the queen, Forbes escaped from threatening triangle and wrote all the way to England, being the solitary passenger on the mailboat. - Youth's Companion.

The Apology Was Still Worse. A philanthropic lady visited the asyand they increase or diminish the angular bend in their stalk until the lum at Kingston, Canada, says Brook lyn Life, and displayed great interest in the inmates. One old man particularly gained her compassion.

"And how long have you been here, my man?" she inquired.
"Twelve years," was the answer.

"Do they treat you well?"

"Do they feed you well?"

"Yes." After addressing a few more questions to him the visitor passed on. She noticed a broad and broadening smile on the face of her attendant and on asking the cause heard with consternation that the old man was none other than Dr. Clark, the superintendent.

She hurrfed back to make apologies. How successful she was may be gathered from these words: "I am very sorry, Dr. Clark. I will never be governed by appearances again.'

Origin of the Cannon

It is a curious fact that the first cannon was cast at Venice. It was called a "bombard," and was invented and employed by General Pisani in a war against the Genoese. The original bombard, which bears the date of 1380, is still preserved and stands at the foot of Pisani's statue at the arsenal. The bombard threw a stone 100 pounds in weight; but another Venetian general, Francisco Barde, improved it until he was able to handle a charge of rock and bowlders weighing 3,000 pounds. It proved disastrous to him, however, for one day during the siege of Zara, while he was operating his terrible engine, he was hurled by it over the walls and instantly

HOMESICK CADETS.

The New Man at West Point and the Pangs of Nostalets

The new man at West Point has one misfortune to endure throughout the first few weeks of his course—he must suffer the pangs of homesickness. He has entered upon a course of discipline quite unlike anything in his experience. Every act of his daily life is regulated by an inflexible system. He has no friend at hand; the word sympathy seems to be unknown. Older endets look on, understand, pity, but give no sign. H. Irving Hancock says in "Life at West Point:"

It is a common sight for a cadet cor-poral, going into the room of a "plebe," to find him sented at his table, pen in hand and a sheet of paper before him, staring blankly at the paper or the wall. The cadet corporal takes in the scene before him.

"Homesick, mister?" he asks.

"Yes, sir!" replies the plebe, looking shamefaced.

"Sure sign a new man's homesick when he's caught at study table writing his resignation," rejoins the corporal composedly.

The plebe, wondering how it is that the cadet corporal is such a mind reader, flushes, looks at the sheet before him and slowly tears it up.

"That's right!" says the corporal. Then, with a momentary touch of sympathy, he goes on: "Don't get down in the mouth, mister. I've been through the nostalgia drill myself. It's tough on you, but when you've been here a little while there's no inducement on earth that could make you leave of your own choice. Brace Homesickness hits 'em all at

Then the corporal glances about and falls at once into the brusque tone of the instructor.

"See here, mister," he remarks, "policing' is one of the most important duties of the soldier. Your shoe brush is out of place. Haven't I teld you where it belongs? And you cap is on your bed. Now, mister".

So he goes on with a list of criticisms which at once reduce life to a practical level. The plebe has enough to do for the next half bour in "tidying up," and at the end of that time he is not tempted to resume his letter. At least, he puts it off for one day
