even weeks ago. She was taken ill after returning from a drive to Reynoldsville, and for a time ber condition was regarded as critical. She improved however, to such an extent that the nurse who had been attending her was allowed to go, and the physicians for a time censed their visits.

"Then typhoid fever set in and about a week ago the announcement was made that she could not recover. While conscious of her critical condition Miss Lenkerd did not loose hope in the belief that she would ultimately recover and her fight against Death was a brave one. She was hopeful to the last, and one of her requests was that as soon as she was able, she wanted her parents to take her back to New Mexico, where the family had lived many years, and where she had -pent the years of her early childhood. "Miss Erie was of a cheerful and bright disposition. Being the eldest of the family she was a source of great comfort to her parents, assisting her mother in the duties of the home, and the care of the family. She was the Idol of her father's heart, the likeness of the pair being most striking, and she was a familiar figure at the North Brady street store, where she proved to be an able assistant. She was about to enter the High School when she contracted the illness that terminated in her death."
