LOCATING JOHN.

The Fate of a Tiger Hunter and His Return Home. A story is told of a young man named John P., who, being in pool health, were to India. His family had instructed him not to spare expense, but to cable three times a week how be was and what he was doing. The first cable message ran;

Am well. Have native guide, Inja. Hunt tigers tomorrow. The next communication did not arrive till two weeks later. It was this: John dead. Killed, Tiger, What do?

Back went the tearful message:

Send on body. A month later there was delivered to the keeper of the receiving vault of M. cemetery a box or coffin so large and heavy that it might have been the home of a second Cardiff Giant. Suspicion having been aroused, a permit was secured and the sealed coffin opened. To the consternation of those present there lay the body of a magnifcent Bengal tiger resting on white satin. The following message was soon racing across the Atlantic:

Some mistake. Some mistake, You send a tiger. Where is John? The following information was soon received: No mistake. No mistake. John inside

Nature's Monument to Washington Among the many monuments to Washington is the one which every visitor to the Cape Verde islands will re member as one of the most corossal and marvelous freaks of natural sculpture in existence. Along the farther side of the harbor of San Vicente, the principal town, rises a bold ridge of dark gray volcanic rocks, the crest of which forms an exact likeness of our immortal George, seemingly lying face upward, as if in a peaceful sleep. The hero's large, bold features, the backward wave of the hair, his massive shoulders and even the frill of the shirt front are all reproduced on a gigantle scale with wonderful exactness. The strange monument, sharply out lined against the deep blue of the tropal sky, is one of the first objects that meet one's eye in approaching the island. Its gigantic proportions, with form a portrait wonderfully true to nature and overpowering in its magnificence.

Pigeon's Milk Not a Joke.

The joke about pigeon's milk has a foundation in fact. After the incuba tion of the young has been completed, the crops of the parent bird become thicker and secrete a sort of curd, with which the young are fed. This description of nourishment is necessary for them, for if the young pigeons are deprived of it during the first week or two after hatching they are sure to die

MADE TO STAND PULLING.

The Great Tensile Strength of the Government's Paper Money. "The way some cashlers pay out small bills in exchange for large must make other men as tired as it wearles me," remarked an observing business man to another Washingtonian as they watched the cashier of a fashionable uptown cafe pull at and strip the ones and twos in exchange for a ten as though he were pulling a piece of molasses candy over a hook and hated to let go.

"It does," acquiesced his friend, who happened to be a United States treasury expert. "The way some cashlers jerk, snap and pull at bills as they pay them out is utterly absurd. The old adage about pinching a silver dollar until the eagle screams pales before the way the up to date flip cashier jerks the long green he handles.

"In this connection I will give you fact that is not generally known, and that is the weight a new treasury single note, and four notes in a sheet, will sustain without breaking. The figures may be accepted as official and accurate.

"A single treasury note measures 34 inches wide by 714 inches long and will suspend 41 pounds lengthwise and 91 pounds crosswige. Notes are printed four to a sheet. A sheet will suspend 108 pounds lengthwise and 177 pounds crosswise.

"The remarkable strength of a United States treasury note may thus be seen at a glance, and I venture to say that not one person in a million would have guessed the great tenacity of the paper which, when properly printed and stamped, becomes good money."

The cashier had interestedly listened to the treasury expert's explanation of the weight sustaining and necessarily resisting power of wear and tear of our paper money, and then he said:

"You see, it is this way: Bills stick together, see, and we cashiers have to make up any shortage out of our own pockets, and that's one reason why we snap and lork the bills so hard, so we will not pay out two for one, as might be done. Again, a two dollar bill is frequently mistaken for a five, and vice versa, and by counting out our money as if it were drops of our lifeblood we are less liable to pass out one for the other."-Washington Star.

I hadn't got the salt taste of the ocean yet when the watch disappeared, and it was three hours later, as I sat in booth drinking beer, when I felt that watch in a side pocket of my coat. I pulled it out in amazement, and i found my slip of paper replaced by one bearing the words, 'Look outside for an ass!' Barbering Used to Be an Art. Time was when barbering was a way up art. In ancient times barbers were surgeons, the only persons who could scientifically "let blood." In London there is still a barber surgeon class. They possess a cap given the guild by Charles II. Around the barber's pole still twines the snake, the subtlest beast of the field, a survival of the brazen serpent lifted up in the wilderness the symbol of the healing art.

Town and Country.

A SWORD OF HONOR.

A saber of honor brought Marshal Ney to dishonor and death. When Napoleon entered Cairo on the 22d of July 1793, he was presented with three swords of henor richly iniaid with preclous stones. He brought them back to Europe, and in 1802 he gave one to Ney and another to Murat, keeping the third for himself. Ney received his at an imperial reception. The sword passed from one to another of those present, among whom was a young subaltern of the Auvergne giment. When Napoleon escaped from Elbe, Ney left the king and took sides with his former chief. After the allies en-tered Paris, Noy made preparations to get out of the country, but his wife and a friend persuaded him that there was really no danger, and he decided to remain in France. Then came the order for his arrest. He fled to a castle in the possession of some friends and suc ceeded in reaching it without his presence being known. One day, feeling tired, he threw himself on a couch, first taking off his oriental sword, which he always were out of affection for the emperor. Hearing voices, he sprang up and hurriedly left the room, forget ting his sword. A minute later a par ty of women and men entered the room one of them being the young subaltern of the Auvergne regiment, now a colo nel. He at once recognized the sword and, calling in some gendarmes, pro ceeded to search the premiss. Finding that he was discovered. Ney gave him self up quietly. On Dec. 7, 1815, the marshal, whose sobriquet was the Bravest of the Brave, the hero of a bundred battles, was shot. Scarcely two months after the owner of the sec ond sword, Murat, bad met his fate in the same way.

An Alliterative Poem on Pigs. One of the book collectors of Philadelphia has in his library a volume of Latin jokes that was printed in Ger many in 1703, says the Philadelphia Record. The name of this volume is "Nugae Venales," and it contains a poem 300 lines long wherein every word-every single word-begins with

Even the title page of the poem contains only "p's." It reads: "Pugna Porcorum, per Publium Porclum, Poetam" ("The Battle of the Pigs," by Publius Poreius, poet).

Here are two lines of the poem that show how strange alliteration, so heavily laid on, appears: Perlege porcorum pulcherrima proella potor; Potando poteris placidam proferre poesim Almost incredible is the patience that must have been required to compose this work of 1,500 words, every one of which begins with a "p."

Spoiling a Tragedy.

Among theatrical anecdotes a time honored chestnut is that which belongs to the tent scene in "Richard III." The story is told of Barry Sullivan, to whom it probably occurred. Anyhow the narrator has thrown in a repartee that is characteristic enough of the famous Irish tragedian. "Who's there?" exclaims Richard at the conclusion of his dreaming. Cates by in his excitement stammered out his answer and abruptly stopped in the middle of his phrase, "'Tis I, my lord, the early village cock."

Sullivan surveyed the bewildered aspeet of the officer for a few seconds with a sardonic grin, as if enjoying the actor's agony, and then growled in an audible tone, "Then why the mischief don't you crow?"

Tennyson when a young man had a strong liking for Gray and classed him and Burns as the two greatest lyric poets of any age or country. He much loved some of Burns' poetry. But be fore all Tennyson placed his Bible. He had also a great liking for Dante's "Inferno" and knew it line for line. He would boast in his pleasant way that If any one read one line he could give the next from memory, and he invariably did it.

This country is not the only one where unconsidered trifles are snapped up by manufacturers and put to practical use. In China the down of the thistic is gathered and mixed with raw silk so ingeniously that even experts are deceived when the fabric is woven. AN ARCTIC MEAL

Getting Supper For Men and Dogs on the Polar Ice Sheet.

Dogs were unhitched and fastened, as usual, and then each of the Eskimos climbed over the ice foot with his snow knife and disappeared behind the para pet, where the other two were already cutting snow blocks. I fastened my dogs, got out their ration of penimican. cut it up and fed them, standing by with whip in hand to see that there was no bullying, and that each dog got his share. Then I unpacked the cooker. oll can and kitchen box, passing them up the ice foot as high as I could reach. I dld not wait for the completion of the igloo to commence my preparations for supper, but with a few strokes of the spade excuvated a niche in the snowbank, put the cooker in out of the wind. filled the lamp with oil and the holler with ice, placed a few snow blocks around it for still better shelter and lighted up. By the time the igloo was completed I had enough water melted our tea, and supper was entirely ready by the time my men had fed the dogs, and they lost no time in freeing their clothing of snow and joining me in the igloo. Still less time was consumed in putting away the ten and biscuit and pemmican, and less again in falling off to dreamless slumber.—Com mander Robert E. Peary in Outing.

The rate of pulsation depends entirely on the movements of the heart, each beat representing a contraction of the left ventricle. The normal pulse of the adult male varies from sixty to eighty beats in the minute. The range of the individual variation is, however, very great. The range in females is even greater, some having a pulse rate of over eighty, others less than sixty, the majority showing a higher rate than

In children the rate is more frequent: At birth, 128 to 144; first year, 120 to 130; at sixteen years, ninety. In old age the pulse is usually above seventy two, but often also between fifty and sixty. The pulse rate is higher in short than tall persons and also varies somewhat with the time of day, independent of meals and movement, diminishing in the forenoon, rising in the afternoon sinking during the night and rising in the morning. Habitual pulse rates be low fifty-six and as low as forty-six have been observed in healthy adults, but they are rare exceptions. We know of no case on record of a healthy pulse

His Hot Bath.

"I had a law partner once in Mississlppl," said a southern lawyer, "who began to feel the effects of long years of hard work at his profession, and h was advised by his physician to go to the Arkansas hot springs and take the baths. The day of his arrival an attendant shut him up in a bathroom and, giving him a thermometer, told him to let the hot water run until it had reached a certain temperature and then to shut it off.

"The old fellow had more clear grit than any man I ever knew. When the attendant went back an hour later, my partner was standing up in a tub of boiling hot water. The skin was fair ly cooked off his feet, but he vowed he wouldn't get out until the specified temperature had been registered. He holding the thermometer up in front of his face instead of putting it in the water."

Plants That Wear Overcoats. Plants have developed almost as many dodges for perpetuating their existence as animals, only we don't so easily recognize them. Did it ever strike you that every seed, bulb or tuber is no merely a reservoir of material for the plant that is to grow out of it, but also a mass of fuel for supplying heat necessary to the sprouting seedlet? More than this. If you look at the early spring buds and flowers, you will notice that those which are likely to be exposed to frost, such as catkins or willow and hazel, are well protected by a thick covering of soft material, a regular plant overcoat.

Too Smart.

"It does not always pay to be too smart," said a lawyer. "At our boarding house a new waitress was employed, and a young chap asked her what he should call her. "'Call me Pearl,' she said.

"'Are you the pearl of great price?"

he asked. "'No,' answered the girl. 'I guess I am the pearl that was cast before swine."—New York Times.

Disinterested Friendship. The majority of men recognize nothing in human affairs as good unless it yields some return, and they love those friends most-as they do their cattlefrom whom they hope to obtain the most profit. AS A WORKING TOOL for the student and the writer, as an authoritative reference book for schools, families and business men, there is one book which offers superior advantages both in the solid value of its information, and the ease with which it is obtained.

One's admiration for Webster's International Dictionary increases daily as it comes to be better known. It never refuses the information sought and it never overwhelms one with a mass of misinformation illogically arranged.

The St. James Gazette of London, England, says: For the teacher, the pu-pil, the student and the litterateur, there is nothing better; it covers everything.
