Weak People

It's not what we eat, but what we digest that makes strength. The trouble with most weak people is, they can neither eat nor digest good food. Such people can't work successfully. It takes fuel to make steam, and it takes food to make strength. A young fellow came in the store the other day. He was white and thin. "I'm afraid I'll have to give up my job," said he. "I'm tired before the day is half gone. I seem to be losing strength all the time."

The clerk said: "Fred, I know something that will help you. It's Vinol. The boss has got hold of a way to prepare cod liver oil so it tastes all right. He calls it Vinol. There is iron in it, and it's just the stuff for fellows like you. It'll give you an appetite. It won't hurt you anyway. Lots of folks round here are taking it, and they tell their friends, and they come and get it. If it don't help you, come back and get your money."

Visiting Cards Artistically Printed at The Star office.

NEW YEAR'S CARDS.

They Originated in Japan and Were Masterpieces of Art. In Japan originated the art of making and the custom of exchanging New Year's cards. Today both are as obsolete in the Flowery Kingdom as in New Year's calling in the United States. More charming art, more delightful custom, are not numbered among the good things that have passed away to suffer, in their time, let us hope, a happy revival. For more than 100 years the designing and coloring of New Year's cards occupied the attention of the foremost draftsmen and wood engravers of Japan. They were made at the command of the noblemen of the emperor's court. In size they were from 6 to 8 inches, and each was inscribed with a poetic sentiment dictated by the noble giving the order. They were printed from five or six blocks, each color requiring, as in modern color printing, a separate block. The blocks were the property of the noble, who retained or destroyed them at will. No reprints for another were ever permitted. A nobleman's New Year's card was like his coat of arms or his sword. The surimono, as Japan's New Year's cards were called, were designed specially to please some ladylove.—New York Press.

The Picture in the Watch. The following anecdote is related of Jerome Bonaparte: He had been playing cards until he lost all his ready money, then pledged his rings and finally laid his watch on the table. It was a small gold one, the back of which opened with a spring. A lady overlooking the game admired the watch and took it up to examine it. On her attempting to open the back Jerome immediately clasped it and said that must not be done. His wife, who stood by, insisted upon knowing what was in it, whereupon Jerome knelt with his hands clasped in prayer, and finally, bursting into tears, quit the room. Jerome then opened the watch and showed to all present that it contained a beautiful miniature of his first wife, Betsy Patterson, with the remark, "You see, I hope, that I could not with propriety let her see it." It was notorious that he remained deeply attached to his first wife long after their separation.

Another Insult.—Washington Post. She Wouldn't Make Trouble. He was not one of those trouble making women. In fact, she had the greatest contempt for people of that kind. She said so herself. "And she spoke of you, too," she said, in telling a friend of a call she had made. "What did she say?" "Oh, I'd rather not tell you, dear. There's no use making trouble, you know."—Chicago Post.

Notes Lure Athletes.

Races through deep snow are an attractive feature of winter sports in Germany, and athletes who take part in them do not always fare very successfully. The reason is because over the ground which the runners must cross are laid nets with strong meshes, and as these are covered by the snow and hence are invisible the men's feet almost always catch in them, the result being that a race instead of being won by the swift runner is generally won by him who is lucky enough to escape the nets or who succeeds in freeing himself the most quickly from their meshes. Races of this kind always attract large crowds, and there is much amusement when the nets begin to get in their deadly work.

Writers Whose Works Are Unread. With care and precision the journal clerks of the senate prepare the daily chronicle of the senate's doings. They are proud of their achievements, and justly so. It is a cause of sore disappointment to the makers of that journal when some thoughtless senator, eager for the morning's business, moves to suspend with the further reading. Other clerks around the desk enjoy the joke and when the proceeding is concluded repeat in an undertone from man to man: "Another insult."—Washington Post.

The Earthly Facts. A story told of Lord Holt, who was lord chief justice of England in the eighteenth century, shows what a deadly enemy to wild superstition a sense of fact may be. A man presented himself to Lord Holt and said: "A spirit came to me from the other world and told me that in your next pros. you must enter a plea of nol. pros.—that is, refusal to prosecute. Lord Holt looked at the man a moment and then smiled. "Do you believe that such a message is wise for a human being to obey?" "It is absolute." "And do you believe that the messenger had a full knowledge of the law of England?" "Yes, and of all law. By following this heaven given advice you will be doing justice."

Helping Out a Poet. Shortly after the publication of Tennyson's famous poem, "A Vision of Sin," the laureate was somewhat startled to receive from Mr. Babbage, the renowned arithmetician, a letter which ran as follows: "Dear Sir—I find in a recently published poem from your pen, entitled 'A Vision of Sin,' the following unwarrantable statement: "Every moment dies a man. Every moment one is born. I need hardly point out to you that this calculation, if correct, would tend to keep the sum total of the world's population in a state of perpetual equipoise, whereas it is a well known fact that the said sum total is constantly on the increase. I would therefore take the liberty of suggesting that in the next edition of your excellent poem the erroneous calculation to which I refer should be corrected as follows: Every moment dies a man And one and a sixteenth is born. I may add that the exact figures are 1.67, but something must of course be conceded to the laws of meter. I have the honor to be, sir, yours, sincerely, C. BABBAGE.

BOSTON HARBOR FROZE.

But That Didn't Keep the Britannia From Sailing on Time. Boston harbor froze over in January of 1844, and the advertised sailing of the Britannia, then in dock, seemed surely to be impossible. But the merchants of Boston would not have it so. They met and voted to cut a way, at their own expense, through the ice, that the steamer might sail practically on time. The contract for cutting the necessary channels was given to merchants engaged, like Frederick Tudor, in the export of ice, not from the harbor. Their task was to cut, within the space of three days, a channel about ten miles long. For tools they had the best machinery used in cutting fresh water ice, and horsepower was employed. The ice was from six to twelve inches in thickness. As the Advertiser of Feb. 2, 1844, described the scene: "A great many persons have been attracted to our wharfs to witness the operations and the curious spectacle of the whole harbor frozen over, and the ice has been covered by skaters, sleds and even sleighs. Tents and booths were erected upon the ice, and some parts of the harbor bore the appearance of a Russian holiday scene." On Feb. 3 the work was done, and the Britannia, steaming slowly through the lane of open water, lined on either side by thousands of cheering spectators, made her way to the sea.—M. A. DeWolfe Howe in Atlantic.

Giving Authority.

A worthy person, on being accused of cribbing, owned to it cheerfully, but added naively: "I always acknowledge the fact by raising two fingers at the opening words, and two fingers again at the end of the borrowed matter, to indicate quotation marks."
