* The Value of a Mothers' Club in Public School Work

A Paper Prepared by Mrs. Maude Booth and Read Before the Recent County Covention of School Directors work here it has seemed to me fitting to Mothers' Clubs in general and of the great benefit they may be in a community in assisting and making more effective the work of the public school. I am aware that to many of you here, the work of the Mothers' Club is comparatively new. In this age of organizations when societies and clubs are being formed for almost every purpose under the sun, we may wonder whether it is necessary to add another one to cellence in the mere technic of execuswell the already long list. But whenever we are in doubt as to the benefit or value of a thing, it is well to ask the question, what is it's object and aim? Is It needed?

Educators and teachers have long felt the great lack of interest and sympathy in their work by the parents. There has always seemed to be a great lethargy on the part of parents in the workings of the public school, the place where for many months of the year their children are being trained, laying the foundations of their characters, in fact their whole future lives. Many parents send their children to school, and from the beginning until the close of the term, never step into the school room, get acquainted with citizen. The education in the public the teacher or interest themselves in schools should be as nearly as possible any way with the school, unless it may be to listen to every idle complaint the children may bring home, and, of course coincide with the child, thus his town, his state, his country, beweakening the influence of the teacher. In fact they know little, and appear to care less, about the school work. This is all wrong. The parents and the teacher should work hand in hand in the education of the child To remedy this, organizations known as Mothers' Clubs have sprung up all over our land. And just here I can not do better than to quote to you from the constitution It's object : "The object of the Mothers' Club shall be to promote educational sentiment in the community, and to render more effective the work of the public school, by extending such co-operation to the teachers as may be deemed advisable." With such an object, do we need to ask the question—Is it needed? Does it not supply a long felt want? What is more needed in the cause of education than to bring the mother and the teacher in closer touch with each other, unifying and simplyfying the work.

This being an organization in which both the mothers and teachers are members, in the monthly meetings the mother and teacher may meet, get acquainted and talk over the welfare of the child, thus establishing a common bond of sympathy and interest, which is too often sadly lacking. Subjects are discussed which are of vital importance in the education and training of children. Often both mother and teacher look at a question in a one sided way. In these monthly meetings conclusions can be reached that would never have been thought of. The mother sees the matter from the teachers point of view and vice versa, which is certainly a good thing and cannot fail to bring about a better condition of affairs in both the home and the school. Then, again, the mothers visit the schools, get acquainted with the needs and the attention of the public is called to existing affairs, and there will be an effort made to secure the needed apparatus as far as possible. The monthly programs are also printed and people of prominence in the town secured to take part, thus calling the attention of the public to the fact that such an organization exists, and that some one is taking an interest in the public schools besides the teachers and school directors. In fact there are numberless ways whereby a Mothers' Club may be beneficial, and result in great good to a community. But I am to tell you of our club here. The Reynoldsville Mothers' Club was organized Jan. 3, 1902, through the earnest efforts of our former principal, Prof. G. W. Lenkerd. In response to his invitation 29 ladies met in this hall and formed themselves into a club becoming the charter members. It was decided to meet each month, securing as speakers the pastors of the churches, teachers, and others interested in education. We have had discussed at these meetings such subjects as physical culture, music in the school, home study, home entertainments, what books to read, ethics, morals and manpers, etc. There has always been a chance given for open discussion, and both mothers and teachers have felt free to respond, giving their opinions and beliefs. Children from the schools have given us recitations, and musical talent from both the school and town has been secured, giving varied, instructive and interesting programs.

Since its organization our Mothers Club has been the means of securing the nucleus of a good library by hold-

But before speaking of our the purchase of an encyclopedia. We feel that more could have been accomto call your attention for a few moments | plished, had we had a larger attendance at our meetings. Our numbers have been few, but we think exceptionally active and faithful. We are planning for greater things the coming year. We wish to interest a greater number of ladies and thus broaden and enlarge our work. It is said of Michael Angelo that once in his class-room work making his criticisms and suggestions, he came to one that suggested some extion but was narrow and crowded in outline, he wrote that one word as his criticism, "Amplius," wider-that is the word that is being written on our Mothers' Club here. We should enlarge and broaden our work. As we look into the future we should form wider plans. The great army of mothers are still non-interested. To reach and hold them should be our aim during the coming term. In the education, development and training of the child. the mothers and teachers should be one in sympathy and purpose, as they have but one aim. The child of to-day has his feet already set in the trail along which his fathers have walked. Let us make him a more intelligent an all around education. The child of to-day soon begins to make the future himself. His home, come what he is. His hands mold the future as the potter handles clay. His turn will soon be here at the wheel to guide the ship of state. The child will be a man. On us mothers and teachers, in a large measure, rests the responsibility of what his future shall be. MRS. MAUDE BOOTH.

Sandy Valley.

The railroad track laying is completed up to the Panther Run mine.

The farmers are busy cutting grass, which is much better than was expected. Mrs. B. T. Cox and daughter, Helen, are visiting at the home of W. T. Cox. Misses Mamie and Sadie McDowell, of Brookville, are visiting their uncle, W. K. Garvin.

Lightning struck W. J. Boner's barn recently. It tore both gables out but did not fire the barn, however.

The Valley is coming to the front as a mercantile town. There are four stores now and prospects for two more. The writer was going to say the weather was very warm, but as the readers of THE STAR will find it out before the paper reaches them, I will not mention it. On Sunday, July 5th, some young men who were camping east of the Valley dressed one of their members up in feminine apparel and marched Main street. It caused considerable guessing to know who the lady was Some thought she was Queen Lil of Honolulu, others thought it was Pennypacker dressed in a mask hunting water lillies; the writer thought it was Carrie Nation and proceeded to hide his cider jug.
