Collision on Low Grade

Two freight trains collided on the ow Grade Division of P. R. R. near Low Grade Division of P. R. R. near Dents Run about 1.50 a. m. Saturday Fortunately the collision occurred on a straight piece of track, giving the trainmen time to save themselves by jumping. Had it not been for the heavy fog it is likely the trains could have been stopped in time to prevent the collision, as neither train was runthe collision, as betther train was run-ning fast at the time. Engine No. 6474, of the eastbound train, was badly disfigured, but the other engine, No. 6481, was not badly damaged. Several cars were piled up, delaying passenge trains from three to four hours. The wreck crew was called out from Reyn-oldsville early Saturday morning.

John McMahan was engineer and Wm. Moore conductor of the east-bound train No. 165, and E. S. Vosburg engineer and Curt Moore conductor of the west-bound double-header extra train. There was some misunderstanding among the crew of train No. 165 and while conductor Moore was in the tele-graph office at Tyler getting orders some one of the crew gave engineer Mc-Mahan a signal to go and the train started without the conductor and orders, and the collision was the result. Had the collision occurred on a curve, where they usually occur, there would have been several funerals. When the telegraph operator at Tyler and Con-ductor Moore discovered that the eastbound train had gone without orders they were in agony until they learned that there was no one killed, as they knew a collision would surely occur.

School Girl Drowned

Miss Laura Etta Bussard, sixteer years old September 2nd, 1903, daugh-ter of John H. Bussard, of Washington township, was drowned in Horm Run, near the Horm school house Monday morning, September 21, 1903. Miss Laura had started to school with two younger sisters and complained of head-ache and a fainting feeling. The other girls got ahead of Laura before they ached the run, and when she did no et to the school house at a reasonable ime one of her sisters started back to ook for her and found her in the run, The girl gave the alarm and the school teacher and other pupils were soon at he run, but Laura was dead when they ulled her out. The water was very w, only a small pool, where she was oued. The supposition is that Laura ent down to water to bathe her head ed fainted and fell into the water, Laura Etta Bussard was well known the pupils of West Reynoldsville bools, as she made her home with her nele, L. W. The Young Men's Reading Room.

About three years ago some of our citizens, who were alive to the best in-trests of our boys and young men, or-ganized what is known as the Young Men's Reading Association. This or-ganization, through the efforts of its ctive membership and the support of the business men of this place, has been renting well furnished rooms and pro-viding the best magazines, both monthly and weekly, and daily papers. All the conveniences and advantages are offered free to all the boys of a reading age and the young men of this community. The ending room at present is on the se loor in the Hoover building. That reading room is appreciated is fully attested to by the fact that during the winter months there is an average of from 15 to 20 young people who visit the room and read every evening, thus making a total monthly average of bu-tween 300 and 400 visitors or readers.

In the light of these few statistics, it is clearly demonstrated that the reading room is an agency for good in this com-munity. Everything which puts into the hands of the young men influences which tend to their intellectual development and moral training is of great importance and worth. The reading room affords not only an excellent sub stitute for the streets, but also furnishes wholesome and ennobling literature. In this sense it helps to raise the mora standard of our young men and increase the degree of intelligence in this community.

Now for some time the borden of maintaining the reading room has rested largely upon the efforts of a few faithful members. To be sure, at the request of these, many of the citizens have liberally responded by way of giv-ing financial support. The great pres-ent need is a livelier interest in this laudable work, on the part both of the members and the people in general. It is a common good, therefore everybody hould enlist in the furthering of Its appeal to our citizens to aid this worthy cause by helping to keep our boys and young men from the streets and by put ting into their hands the best literature that can be secured, not only by giving it financial support, but also by giving t encouragement and moral support.

Will Open Its Doors for The First Time

On Saturday, Sept. 26. With a full line of fresh home dressed beef, veal, lamb and pork, smoked meats, ham, sliced or whole, breakfast bacon sliced or by the piece, boiled ham, dried beef, dry salt side, fresh sausage, country sausage, vienna and smoked sausage, all kinds of bologna and puddings.

We will sell everything kept in a first-class meat market. Will use the best of all goods in our line at prices based on "live and let live" rules. We have not time to quote prices this week, but will in our next ad. Our greatest aim will be to give our patrons the very best meats the market affords for the least possible price. Give me a trial and be convinced that no better fresh goods is kept anywhere, and not at the same price.

I believe in one Creator and in all religions; I believe that 16 ounces make a pound; I believe that as soon as meat is embaimed it should be buried; I believe that every dog has his day, but it he eats embalmed meat he won't live out half his days. J. C. NORRIS, Prop. Reynoldsville Market.
